This program will inspire you to cook the more efficient way - by microwave. Some microwave dishes will be prepared during the program and recipes shared. Delores Hippensteel, Extension Educator in Steuben County will be presenting the program.

Remembering the Heroes of 9/11

It's not easy to mark the anniversary of a tragedy. But instead of focusing on perpetrators, we can celebrate the heroism of Americans

First, we remember the thousand of people working in the affected buildings. They were involved in the business of keeping America successful and strong. May they have eternal rest in the knowledge that America will avenge them.

We honor all who worked to save others. There were many who helped people find their way down the seemingly endless steps of the towers. Others helped the injured as they poured out of buildings. We will always remember them.

Members of the New York Fired Department have been honored across the wide expanse of this country. Those who died on September 11 were heroes. They had plans for their families which were forever changed on that day, because they died in the line of duty. Police and firemen are willing to do that. We will forever remember their courage.

At the Pentagon, men and women of the armed forces from all ranks gave their lives. There are many stories of people helping each other. Members are willing to die in the line of duty, but they would rather have died on the battlefield.

The evildoers planned to destroy the White House on that day, but they didn't reckon on airline passengers who were willing to give their lives to defeat them. There were so courageous. Their only weapons were personal strength and total purpose. But somewhere over Pennsylvania, they rushed their captors and kept them from killing more people and destroying national landmarks.

They gave their lives. They have our eternal gratitude for their

SEPTEMBER 11 AND 12: How GIULIANI HELD THE CITY, AND COUNTRY TOGETHER

He arrived at the World Trade Center after the second plane hit. When the south tower imploded, he was nearly trapped in his makeshift headquarters near the site. Then Mayor Rudy Guiliani led a battered group of city officials, reporters and others north through the blizzard of ash and smoke. A detective jimmied open a firehouse door so the mayor could revive the city government from there. Then he took to the airwaves to reassure the people.

Later he said, "I was so proud of the people I saw on the street. No chaos, but they were frightened and confused, and it seemed to me that they needed to hear from my heart where I though we should go." He thought of Winston Churchill and the people in London during the Blitz of 1940. Churchill kept their spirits up, and that was a comforting thought. On September 12 while President Bush was elsewhere for security reasons, it was the mayor who emerged as the leader the nation yearned for.

He was everywhere, making five or six TV appearances a day without notes or a teleprompter. His tone and demeanor were a mix of bravery and defiance. He said, "Tomorrow New York is going to be here, and we're going to rebuild, and we're going to be stronger than we ever were before. I want the people of New York to be an example to the rest of the country, and the rest of the world, that terrorism can't stop

Was 9/11 An Act of War?

After September 11, everyone was calling the attacks an "act of war" - everyone but the insurance industry. Acts of ware are specifically excluded from coverage. Insurance exposure has been estimated at $30 billion – all of which was covered.

STREET FAIR 4-H BOOTH

Plans have been finalized for another successful 4-H Pancake & Sausage Booth at the Bluffton Free Street Fair, September 17 –

The 4- foot, yellow and green tent will again be located one half block west of Main and Market in front of the Good Shepherd Bookstore.

The 4-H booth, which is in its 53rd year at the Fair was started by a group of 4-H supporters to raise funds for the 4-H Park. Today, the booth still helps raise funds for the 4-H Park, along with educational trips and workshops.

The main menu items of course are pancakes and sausage! However, through the years French Toast, Sausage and Ham sandwiches, and Grilled Cheese sandwiches have been added. During the 5 day event, 900 lbs. of buttermilk pancake flour and 1400 lbs. of sausage will be prepared and served!

"Volunteers play a big role in the success of the booth as they do in all of the community organization booths at the Street Fair," says Mike Piqune, Chairman of the booth and First Vice President of the 4-H Association.

The day shift chairpersons especially welcome more volunteers to help serve the hungry fairgoers.

A special thanks again goes out to the Wells County Extension

Homemaker organization who will be staffing the booth on Thursday.

Hours for the Pancake and Sausage Booth will be: open at 5 PM on Tuesday and 7 AM, Wednesday - Saturday, rain or shine!

DEADLINE FOR YOUTH ESSAY CONTEST

Two Indiana eighth graders will win a trip to Washington, D.C., through the essay contest sponsored by Sen. Dick Lugar, Indiana Farm Bureau and Farm Bureau Insurance Companies.

This year's contest theme is "Growing Nutrition Right Here in Indiana."

It encourages students to think about the overall benefits of eating properly and why it is important to maintain a healthy diet, said Carolyn Hegel, Indiana Farm Bureau second vice president. The essay should also mention the variety of nutritious products grown and eaten in Indiana.

"With increased attention being focused on adolescent health issues, it is important each of us considers the meal choices we make on a daily basis," Hegel said.

A boy and girl will be selected as winners from each county and each IFB district. District winners will receive a $50 savings bond. Then, the boy and girl with the best overall essays at the state level will receive an all-expense-paid trip to the nation's capitol. State winners will be announced in December at IFB's annual convention.

All Hoosier eighth graders are eligible to enter the contest, which is designed to increase students' awareness of the significance of Indiana agriculture, how it relates to the food supply and their health. However, principals or supervising teachers must submit all essays.

Essays must be sent to the IFB county woman leader in the county where the school is located, and they must be postmarked by Oct. 18. The maximum allowable length for the essays is 300 words. They can be typed or handwritten in blue or black ink. They will be judged on grammar and spelling, understanding of the topic, neatness, overall appearance of the essay, originality and creativity.

For more information on the contest, contact school principals, county Farm Bureau offices or the Indiana Farm Bureau Women's Division at (317)692-7830.

TEACHER WORKSHOP

Indiana Farm Bureau Women's Division is offering a daylong educational opportunity for elementary school teachers on Sept. 30.

The Teachers Workshop, which will be held at the Farm Bureau home office in downtown Indianapolis, offers teachers a variety of agriculture-based educational programs, videos, materials, lesson ideas, and a farm tour.

Registration for the workshop is $25, but this fee will be refunded when teachers check in at the registration table on the day of the event. Participants will receive lunch and transportation to and from the farms, as well as an assortment of educational materials to take back to their classrooms. For more information or to receive a registration form by fax or mail, call 1-800-FARM-BUR and ask for the Women's Division.

During the morning portion of the workshop, teachers will see new educational materials developed by IFB. They will also visit lesson stations with themes such as "Wearing Nature's Bounty," "Burger Snacks," "Banking on Beautiful Bones," "Eggs and More," "Do You Have a Green Thumb?," "Butter - Made It Myself" and others.

In the afternoon, teachers will visit two local farms. "We have award-winning programs that we can't wait to put in the hands of Indiana's educators," said IFB 2nd Vice President Carolyn Hegel. "I encourage teachers to contact the Women's Division to find out more."

BRMC PLANS FOR

DIGITAL MAMMOGRAPHY

Bluffton Regional Medical Center has purchased a state-of-the-art digital mammography system called the Senographe 2000D made by GE Medical Systems. Bluffton Regional is the first hospital in the state to purchase this system. This cutting-edge technology will be available in early October. High-quality film-based mammography will still be available for the select few women who are unable to have a digital mammogram.

This new mammography system produces breast images through an array of computer detectors rather than on X-ray film. The images are clear and can offer better visibility, especially in women with dense breast tissue. The images are processed in just a few seconds. Women do not have to wait while the films are developed to be sure the images are usable; that means the test takes less time than a film mammogram.

An added feature of Bluffton Regional's digital mammography system is computer-aided detection, which allows images to be reviewed by a sophisticated software program to identify any additional concerns and brings them to the radiologist's attention.

"Summit Radiology is proud to be part of a medical community willing to make such an important investment in being a leader in the battle against breast cancer," states Brett A. Hagedorn, M.D., chairman of radiology at Bluffton Regional. "Bluffton Regional will now be able to provide analysis through the computer-aided detection system, with the additional benefits of digital imaging."

"This system enables us to offer our patients state-of-the-art mammograms in less time than a traditional mammogram," adds Linda Sliger, vice president of diagnostics and therapeutics. "The ability to generate images within seconds and the ability to magnify and manipulate those images greatly reduces call backs for patients."

"The purchase of this $500,000 digital mammography system is an integral part of our commitment to providing the communities we serve with leading-edge technology," states Tom Clark, CEO, Bluffton Regional. "It is a considerable step in breast cancer detection. We are proud to be on the forefront, bringing this technology to our patients and the state of Indiana."
