LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Hoosiers Get Direct Access to Physical Therapists

By: Cory Fornal, SPT and Jessica Newblom, SPT
 Institution: University of Indianapolis

Physical therapy is an occupation that deals with the promotion of health and treatment of injuries caused by physical means. Physical therapists have to complete doctoral level education focusing on the health science. They are trained in strengthening, balance, endurance, breathing techniques, wound healing, and surgical rehabilitation. Recently, Indiana has passed a bill, HB 1034, that gives patients direct access to physical therapy. The bill goes into effect July 1, 2013. The bill states:

Physical therapy services without a referral. Allows a physical therapist to evaluate and treat a patient without a referral for not more than 24 calendar days. Requires a physical therapist to obtain a referral from the patient's provider if further treatment by the physical therapist is needed. Provides that a physical therapist may not perform spinal manipulation of the spinal column or the vertebral column unless: (1) the physical therapist is acting on the order or referral of a physician, an osteopath, or a chiropractor; and (2) the referring physician, osteopath, or chiropractor has examined the patient before issuing the order or referral. Provides that a physical therapist may not perform sharp debridement unless a physical therapist has an order or referral of a licensed physician, osteopath, or podiatrist.

This means that you do not need to go to your primary care physician to get a referral to physical therapy. For example, if you have any muscle pain or injury that you don't think is appropriate for your physician, you can now call up your local physical therapist. The goal for this profession is that the general public will have a physical therapist just as they have a dentist, doctor, or optometrist. People can benefit from having direct access to a physical therapist in many ways. If an injury as occurred, one may have quicker time to treatment of that injury. It will also save money for individuals and insurance companies because it takes out the middle man. Finally, physical therapists typically have more time available to spend with a client to address any health needs.

In Northeast Indiana there are several local Physical Therapy clinics.

Indiana Physical Therapy, with location in Fort Wayne, Bluffton, and Huntington, can be contacted at (260)432-4711 or www.indianapt.com for more information. Bluffton Pediatrics PC, for child physical therapy, can be contact at (260)824-9460. Marion Physical Therapy Center, can be contacted at (765)662-9905. You may also visit your local hospital or health care facility to ask about local rehab services in your area.

VISTA OPPORTUNITY

Pathfinder Services is now accepting applications for two new volunteer positions targeting to begin in July. The two new positions are for VISTA (Volunteers In Service To America) volunteers through AmeriCorps, a Corporation for National & Community Service, and will work collaboratively with a great deal of cross over and support with Marketing and Volunteerism for Pathfinder Services.

The Marketing/Social Media VISTA volunteer position will be focused on developing and initiating marketing and social media plans to build capacity of the community stabilization programs of Pathfinder Services through social media and alternative platforms.

The Volunteer Engagement VISTA volunteer position will help design and create a comprehensive community volunteer program to help drive the community engagement efforts of Pathfinder Services. This VISTA will develop a volunteer recruitment and management system to enable Pathfinder Services to expand quality services to clients with economic and developmental barriers.

The VISTA volunteers will be instrumental in assisting with the organization's key events as well as additional marketing and development, revenue generation and community development efforts for the organization.

"The VISTA volunteer program continues to be an outstanding partnership between Pathfinder Services, AmeriCorps, and NeighborWorks America," states Loretta Mottram, Senior Director of Business Development for Pathfinder Services. "It is a perfect opportunity for individuals to add one year of community service to their resume. Our two volunteers will work hands-on in the Huntington and Fort Wayne community through our marketing events, revenue generation, branding efforts, and community involvement of our organization," concluded Mottram.

For more information on becoming a VISTA volunteer at Pathfinder Services please contact Loretta Mottram at (260) 356-0500 Ext. 3122 or at lmottram@pathfinderservices.org by Friday, May 31st.

AmeriCorps VISTA provides the following benefits to its member volunteers: Child Care allowance if appropriate, an Education Award to reduce tuition or End of Service Stipend, Health Insurance Coverage, Living Allowance, Relocation Allowance, and Training. Helpful skills include education or experience in Social Work, Counseling, Architectural Planning, Business/Entrepreneur, Communications, Community Organization, Public Speaking, and knowledge of local government.

Pathfinder Services is a part of a national program in which VISTA members will be placed at community-based organizations around the country. Working together through NeighborWorks America, more than 150 VISTAs will build on a 30-year track record of working with communities to spur reinvestment and bring program expertise, research, and infrastructure support to maximize and replicate successful strategies. The VISTAs will generally build the capacity of NeighborWorks organizations (NWOs) to reduce the number of foreclosures, stabilize communities affected by foreclosures, and protect and build personal and community assets in low-and moderate-income communities.

NUISANCE WILDLIFE

Nuisance wild animals are a common problem in the spring, and Hoosiers have several options for dealing with them.

People can always call a licensed wild animal control company. For the name of a licensed company, visit dnr.IN.gov/fishwild/2351.htm.

Hoosier landowners or tenants also can trap and release or kill raccoons, skunks, opossums, squirrels, beavers, muskrats, minks, long-tailed weasels, and foxes on their own property without a permit if these animals are damaging that property.

Live traps for capturing animals can be purchased from garden supply or home improvement stores. Be careful when live-trapping wild animals in the spring because they may have young. If the animal is to be released after capture, it must be released in the county of capture and cannot be kept as a pet, sold, traded or given to another person. Releasing wild animals on a city, county or state property may be illegal or require written permission; contact proper officials before releasing wild animals on public property.

To keep wild animals from becoming a nuisance, DNR wildlife officials recommend the following:

- Pick up dog and cat food at night and keep birdfeeders out of the reach of wild animals or bring in birdfeeders at night.

- Install a commercial chimney cap made of sheet metal and heavy screen. Repair soffits to prevent access to attics, and install strong, metal vent covers.

- Prune tree limbs at least 10 feet away from the roof.

- Buy heavy metal garbage cans with lockable lids; otherwise, keep garbage cans indoors as much as possible.

- Install metal skirting around the bottoms of decks.

- Provide shelter structures for fish in ornamental ponds and water gardens; cover the pond during the night with metal screening.

Nuisance Canada geese also can create problems in the spring when nesting. You can oil the eggs of Canada geese or remove their nests after registering with the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. A link to the USFWS goose egg and nest destruction registration page is available at dnr.IN.gov/fishwild.

A list of licensed nuisance waterfowl control operators that are trained to remove adult geese is at dnr.IN.gov/fishwild/files/fw-NuisanceWaterfowlControlOperators.pdf.

Pond owners experiencing problems with otters should contact their district wildlife biologist for more information or to request a special control permit.

BUYING A CAR?

Here's What You Should Know

If you are thinking about buying or leasing a car, there's a lot to consider before you make a final decision. First, you need to decide what type of car will fit your needs and your budget. With so many choices available in the car market, setting a budget first helps you narrow down your search based on what you can afford. Other important considerations include safety measures, fuel economy, and the credibility of the dealer or individual selling you the car. Use these tips from USA.gov to help in your search:

- Safety: Many tests are done on car safety before any vehicles hit the roads. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) and Insurance Institute for Highway Safety are just two places you can check on a car's safety rating and features. You can also find out from NHTSA if a vehicle has been recalled for safety defects.

- Title: If you're buying from an individual seller, it is important to check on the title to make sure you are working with the actual vehicle owner. You can check on the title with your local Better Business Bureau. Just enter your zip code, and you'll find an office to assist you. If you're buying from a dealer, you can check on their credibility with your local consumer affairs office.

- Leasing: If you are considering leasing a car, make sure you ask the dealer for all of the financial information up front, including details on wear and tear standards, if there is a limit on how many miles you can drive a year, the manufacturer's warranty and more.

- Financing: Whether you're leasing or buying a car, most people have to do some type of financing. Two common types are direct lending or dealership financing. It's important to do your research so you know which type of financing is right for you. The Federal Trade Commission explains your options and defines financing lingo so you can be prepared.
