Kudos, Kicks & Karats

THE UPTOWN GARDENER
 by Ruth Herring

The rains we have received has certainly helped the good earth. Can't believe how much my poor sick tomato plant has grown, it has actually started ripening, kinda small but they are tasty. The flowers in the planter in front of house is really looking good.

Last spring I planted some caladium bulbs in the planter thinking I would move them to where ever I wanted them in the flower beds, well I actually forgot about them and they all popped up but not where I had planted them.

They are slow growers so I put them in the back so I could plant other in front. Well I had forgotten about them and every one came up but not where I had put them. Evidently the friendly squirrels decided to rearrange them and thought I may as well leave them, they did such a good job of spacing them very evenly. Now they are crowding out some of the annuals I had put in but they do look good and very healthy. I guess that is the payback of them digging up the tulip bulbs which I am not happy about. Those are the ones my brother in Texas sent to me for my 80th birthday and I am hoping he doesn't feel sorry having lost so many and decides to send me 82 for my birthday which is in a few days. I think if so I would be tempted to send them back and let the copper heads feast on them.

Last time I had a recipe of my mom's butterscotch pie which I had a lot of kind remarks from readers relating to the days their moms made it the same way with the old heavy iron skillet. Here is the modern day version of how I make it not quite as good as I remember it but it passed at our house.

Take 1/4 cup cornstarch and 1 cup brown sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt and blend it together well, add 2 cups milk gradually mixing it in well and cook until it thickens almost to boiling point. Remove from heat, beat 3 egg yolks and add a small portion of the hot mixture to the eggs and stir in well then slowly add rest of the hot mixture. Add 3 tablespoons butter, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and 1/4 teaspoon lemon extract, return this to cook on medium heat about 1 minute longer. Pour into baked pie shell, top with egg meringue and brown in oven till lightly browned. Or take the easy way and top with whipped cream or cool whip. Not as good as moms knowing she made it with rich fresh cows milk and home churned butter and eggs fresh from the chicken house, but it's still pretty good.

TREE KILLING PESTS

Watch for tree-killing pests this week and through the end of the summer. You could help save Indiana's forests.

Citing the threat to Hoosier forests, Gov. Mike Pence has proclaimed the week of Aug. 14-20 as Forest Pest Awareness Week. The purpose is to put the state's residents on high alert during a time when signs of such threats tend to appear.

Indiana is one of several states teaming to educate citizens to identify and, more importantly, report suspected tree-killers in their communities.

Emerald ash borer, which has claimed ash trees across the state and elsewhere, is just one example. Other forest pests may be on the way.

Asian longhorned beetle (ALB) is an invasive beetle from China that can kill 13 different kinds of native hardwood trees. The USDA is working with Ohio to eradicate it from Bethel, Ohio, which is 35 miles from the Indiana state line. This beetle likely entered the country in wood packing pallets. People can unknowingly transport the bug in their vehicles by moving firewood.

To date 85,000 trees in more than 61 square miles have been removed at the Ohio site.

"Alert citizens are the key to detecting pests like ALB before they get out of control," said Megan Abraham, state entomologist and director of the DNR Division of Entomology & Plant Pathology. "If ALB escapes into the forest, it will add to the devastation from emerald ash borer."

August is significant because it's show time for adult ALBs. Watch for a bug with an inch-long shiny black body with white spots, long black and white-striped antennae, and bluish feet. Maple, willow, elm, horse chestnut and birch trees are its favorite foods.

Signs of ALB include pockmarks in the bark of large tree branches and trunks. The pockmarks may ooze dark-colored sap. Large, perfectly round (half-inch diameter) exit holes are another sign. Wood shavings may be seen in branch crotches or around the base of infested trees.

For more on ALB see BeetleBusters.info. To report a suspected infestation, call DNR at 1-866-NO-EXOTIC.

Thousand cankers disease of black walnut is the new threat to Indiana forest landowners. Indiana has 31.5 million black walnut trees, a potential $1.7 billion loss if infected. The disease is caused by a fungus and a tiny beetle. The state already bans imports of walnut products from states with confirmed infestations.

This disease has not been detected in a black walnut tree in Indiana. However, the disease occurs in Butler County, Ohio, next to Franklin County, Indiana.

"Watch for dried, shriveled leaves clinging to dead branches in the tops of infected walnut trees in August," said Phil Marshall, forest health specialist with DNR Division of Forestry.

Report any suspect trees to DNR at 1-866-NO-EXOTIC.

More on thousand cankers disease is at dnr.IN.gov/entomolo/6249.htm.

"The public really is the first line of defense for our forests," Marshall said. "We hope Hoosiers remember not to move firewood, educate themselves about the damage forest pests can do, and be on high alert for signs of these tree killers. If

GRIEF & STRESS SEMINAR'S

On August 25, Huntington University's Institute for Leadership and Counseling has invited Dr. H. Norman Wright and Dr. Larry Mercer to present seminars on effectively managing grief and stress. The seminars will take place at College Park Church, 1945 College Avenue, Huntington, Indiana.

"We are excited to offer these seminars to the public, in addition to our graduate students.

The topics are relevant to many and the expertise of Dr. Wright and Dr. Mercer is well documented. We are also pleased to offer continuing education credit (CEUs) for social workers, marriage and family therapists and mental health counselors at no cost," stated Dr. Jerry E. Davis, director, graduate leadership and counseling programs / professor of counseling.

Wright is a licensed marriage, family and child therapist with 30 years of private practice experience under his belt. His lecture titled "Tremors of Life:

Ministering at a Time of Loss, Crisis, and Trauma" will ask and begin to answer the question, "what is a loss in your life that you have never fully grieved over?" Wright will address the categories of loss, the definition of grief, and the steps involved in moving forward. The morning seminar will take place from 10:00 a.m. until noon.

Mercer holds degrees in theology and ministry and serves as an executive coach and works with leaders of churches, educational institutions and nonprofit organizations.

Mercer's lecture is titled "Brain-Based Leadership & Coaching: Integrating Findings from Neuroscience with Scripture to Enhance Your Personal and Professional Effectiveness" and will begin to unpack the question of how you can minimize the negative impact of stress in your life. Using the findings of neuroscience research and Scripture, Mercer will provide practical strategies to empower you to deal with stress. The afternoon seminar will run from 1:00-2:00 p.m.

Both seminars are free and open to the public, but registration is required by going to eventbright.com.

There is a $10 charge for lunch and seating is limited. You will need to pre-pay for your lunch ticket no later than Tuesday, August 16. Nearby restaurants are available if you do not want to attend the seminar's luncheon.

SUPER SPIDERS

Preschool-age children and their adults are invited to Salamonie Preschool's "Super Spiders" on Sept. 14.

The class will be offered from 10-11:30 a.m. and again from 12:30-2 p.m. at Salamonie Interpretive Center in Lost Bridge West State Recreation Area, Andrews.

Each program is designed to enhance the preschooler's basic education, including learning letters, crafts, social interaction and time outdoors, always with a nature-related theme.

The program fee is $2 per child. Advance registration is appreciated. Register by calling Upper Wabash Interpretive Services at (260) 468-2127.

For more information on other UWIS programs, see dnr.IN.gov/uwis or facebook.com/upperwabash, or call (260) 468-2127.

BUS TRIP

Wells Community Theater (WCT), a segment of Creative Arts, is offering a bus trip on September 17th to see the Broadway hit Wicked in South Bend.

The show begins at 2pm and will be performed at the Morris Performing Arts Center. Proceeds from this event will serve as a fundraiser for the next WCT's production in June 2017.

"We had such a wonderful time on our last bus trip to see Phantom of the Opera," commented Joel Harmeyer, executive director of Creative Arts. "Attendees of that trip asked if we would sponsor another trip to see Wicked in September. People really enjoy not having to worry about driving and parking. The trip is a tremendous value."

The cost of the trip is $135 per person. This price includes a ticket to the show and transportation in a chartered coach provided by Excursions Trailways. Participants will leave from the Creative Arts parking lot (211 Water Street, Bluffton, IN 46714) at 9:30am on Saturday, September 17, 2016. Before the performance, the bus will make a stop for lunch.

After the show, there will be a scheduled stop for dinner. Attendees are responsible for the cost of their meals. We anticipate arriving back in Bluffton by 9pm that evening.

BACK TO SCHOOL EYE CARE

It's back to school time, and the Indiana Optometric Association (IOA) is encouraging parents to schedule their child's eye exam. According to the American Optometric Association, one in four children has an undiagnosed vision problem simply because they may not recognize that their eyesight isn't optimal or is changing. Dr. Polly Hendricks said, "Comprehensive eye exams are one of the most important investments a parent can make to help

CAMPUS SAFETY TIPS

As the end of the summer season quickly approaches, the Indiana Department of Homeland Security reminds college students to think safety as they begin the fall semester.

Students should help create a safe environment on campus by staying aware at all times. This will help to prevent crimes and other emergency situations from happening on campus. Follow these tips to encourage a comfortable, safe college experience:

In the Dorm:

- Talk to the resident assistant or building manager/landlord to gather any important emergency information.
- Know the rules. Don't bring prohibited items into the building.
- Don't prop open doors that are supposed to remain locked.
- Consider investing in a safe to protect valuable items and information, such as passports, social security cards and serial numbers and pictures of valuable items.
- Know a way out in case of an emergency. Have multiple escape routes in order to be prepared.

On Campus:

- When entering a classroom or any other building, take note of all potential exits.
- Don't walk alone at night. Call the campus police, campus escort or a friend for an escort.
- Stay on top of emergency alerts by signing up for mobile campus alerts.
- Memorize the campus emergency number or have it on speed dial.
- Leave a copy of class and work schedules with a roommate or close friend.

maximize their child's education and contribute to overall health and well-being, especially since some vision problems may not have warning signs. Unfortunately, parents and educators often incorrectly assume that if a child passes a school screening, their vision is fine."

Pediatric vision care is one of the Affordable Care Act's Essential Health Benefits. This means millions of children gain direct access to local optometrists for comprehensive eye exams and treatment, including medical eye care, through health insurance. This benefit is subject to the insurance deductible. The Indiana Optometric Association recommends that a child's first eye exam take place at six months of age. Unless problems are detected, exams should then be given at age three, again before a child enters kindergarten and yearly thereafter.

To find an optometrist in your area, please visit www.ioa.org and click on the Find a Doctor link.

The Indiana Optometric Association was founded in 1897 and is the only statewide organization representing the interests of optometrists. Doctors of Optometry are primary health care providers for the

from the American Counseling Association
Most of us have dreams and goals that we once thought were keys to our happiness, yet, for whatever reasons, we've just never quite achieved them.

This doesn't necessarily mean we're not happy with our lives, but there may be times when we still may feel frustrated or disappointed about those unfulfilled dreams.

While there's no magic way to make all your dreams come true, you can take action to get closer to your life's goals and to lessen those feelings of frustration.

One starting point is to put the past behind you. Holding on to unresolved anger and old resentments uses up energy and accomplishes nothing. Forget past hurts or abandonments and instead begin managing your daily life so that it reflects who you are and what you value.

It also helps to be realistic in evaluating your goals. In romance, for example, there is no "ideal" relationship or "perfect" mate. But there can be someone who can accept and care about the real you, and who is able to get things right more often than not.

Similarly, there is no perfect job, but there are work situations that can challenge you and provide a real sense of accomplishment.

Knowing yourself is vital to feeling more fulfilled. What

A story to tell about - back during WW2 my brother in law was home on leave from European tour with Air Force and starved for home cooking. He and I were at the barn, he told me mom had a fresh made butterscotch pie at the house and I was to sneak in and get the pie and bring one fork (that meant I was not going to get any) he told me if I didn't bring the pie down to him he would tie me in the barn. Off I go to the house to see if I could save my life from being tied up in the barn. At the time she had a soft spot for any vet who came back from the war and I was glad for her feelings. I returned to the barn with 2 nice pieces of pie and 2 forks.

He was a special big brother to me and many memories of times together.

Have a great rest of summer.

are your personal strengths and interests? Once identified, put time and energy into nourishing them. Rather than trying to be someone you're not, enhance who you already are. Whatever you do well, do it frequently and proudly and you'll find that rewards will follow.

If you want to achieve specific goals, it's vital to take action toward them, rather than simply dreaming about them and waiting for something to materialize. Even small steps in the right direction can make a difference. Maybe it's a first phone call, rewriting your resume, or taking a class. While we usually know the end result we want, we often fail to take that first step toward making it come about.

You also want balance in your life. Saying "no" to excessive demands on your time, talent or goodwill will allow you time for the things you really want to do.

Reaching your life's goals means that you stop letting old beliefs and others' ideas define who you are and what you have to do. Instead, accept that you, and only you, can take action to reach the dreams and goals that really matter to you.

ARE YOU A HAPPINESS HOARDER?

If you are a caregiver, do you find it hard asking for help when it comes to your home?

If that's a problem for you, this story may help make it easier to ask for help if you need it. Incidentally, we all need help in areas we aren't competent in. We get accountants to help with our bookkeeping, and lawyers to help with legal issues and we're willing to get help with electricity and plumbing problems, but for some reason when it comes to our homes, we caregivers have a crazy notion we should be able to take care of everything ourselves.

The whole self-help movement implies you can do everything yourself. Lord knows you've tried, but how's that working for you?

Female caregivers are usually in service-rendering businesses; teachers, doctors, nurses, and mothers (even though being a mom isn't considered a business, it really is). As a life coach, today, I worked with a lovely woman from PA who has been an RN for thirty years. She explained how much she adores her calling because she loves to help people.

When I asked her to explain more about the feeling of helping others, she said, "When I help a patient, I feel happy knowing, because of me, that person is happier. I don't feel arrogant, just important in being part of another's well-being and happiness." She went on to tell me she is respected by the doctor's at the hospital she works in and she's eager to go to work every day.

Because her home was in critical condition she asked a doctor friend if he thought she had Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD). The doctor asked her these questions:

"Do you get to work on time?" (Yes.) "Have you ever missed going to work?" (No.) "Do you pay your bills on time?" (Yes.) With these answers, her friend said, "No you don't have ADD. This woman was relieved (as if having Attention Deficit Disorder was some fatal disease).

After reading a lot of the material I've written about ADD, she decided to get another professional opinion. This next doctor gave her a test. She passed having ADD with flying colors, but was, at the same time devastated to think something was wrong with her brain. It was important for me to talk her into the joy of having ADD, because it's a wonderful thing to have as long as you understand how to live with it!

When I suggested she get help with getting her home organization, she said, "Oh I'd be too embarrassed to let someone in to do that."

When I explained I wasn't going to leave her alone until she agreed to bring someone in, she realized I was serious and she came up with a person's name who was actually her best friend and had been in her home and already knew of her dirty little secret.

Once she'd agreed to get help from this person, I said something to her she'd never thought about before and maybe you haven't either. "Do you realize you'll be giving your friend an opportunity to feel happy knowing because of her, you are happier? She won't feel arrogant, just important for being part of your well-being and happiness. And just think, if you don't ask for help, you'll be a happiness hoarder!" We don't think that we're happiness hoarders when we don't ask others for help, but really we are. By reflecting her words about how she feels helping others to apply to someone's feelings for helping her, she got excited to call her friend. Don't be a happiness hoarder. Ask for help.
