of agriculture teachers in Indiana high schools and this program joins our already strong offerings in education and agribusiness," stated Dr. Michael Wanous, vice president for academic affairs and dean of the faculty.

Although there are more than 150 high schools in Indiana offering agriculture, there is a shortage of agricultural instructors in the state and nationwide. As such, HU is uniquely positioned to train future agriculture teachers from a faith-based perspective in a small college environment. The agricultural education program will include courses already offered in agribusiness and education, while adding new courses in agriculture and agricultural instruction that will provide the breadth of academic and practical experience needed. In addition to on-campus education, instruction will include hands-on vocational skills instruction through local education partnerships and field experience in agriculture through internships. The agricultural education program is the newest component of HU's well-respected Educator Preparation Program.

"The Huntington University Teacher Education Program is excited to be able to join with Agricultural Studies in offering an option for students in Indiana and the surrounding area to prepare for a career in Agricultural Education in the context of a small, private, faith-based institution. We believe this will be an educational option that many students will find attractive and we look forward to helping these students prepare for this important career," stated Dr. Terrell Peace, director of graduate & undergraduate teacher education.

Huntington University began instruction in agriculture in the 2015-16 academic year through its Hauptert Institute for Agricultural Studies. Students can major in agribusiness, focusing their studies in one of eight tracks within the agribusiness major: agri-management, agri-marketing, agri-economics & finance, agri-entrepreneurial small business management, crop production, animal production, ministry & missions, and communications & public policy. Courses in place for this major include agricultural sciences such as crop science, animal science, agro-ecology, soils, etc., as well as business courses and basic science courses in biology, chemistry, and statistics.

"I have seen considerable interest in Ag Education among our current students as well as prospective students. We have also received encouragement from ag teachers, farmers, agribusiness and agbiosciences professionals, and others who are excited to see this offered at HU," said Dr. Raymond Porter, director of the Hauptert Institute for Agricultural Studies. "The Education Department here at HU is top-notch and has a fantastic track record of training teachers in other disciplines. We want to make Huntington a top choice for those who see their future in preparing secondary and middle-school students for careers in agriculture and agricultural science."

INTERRUPTED DREAMS

by Larry Ryan

Last night I woke up at 4:20 a.m. Not my normal waking mode. No, this was a dramatic moment linked to a violent, left leg cramp! This instantaneous awakening also ended an espionage-like dream in which I was involved with another secret agent.

We were inside a terrorist compound when I was unexpectedly apprehended by one of the resident bad guys. However, my buddy quickly and expertly surprised and unarmed the adversary. Thus saving my skin! The sudden "cramping" ended this highly secretive mission. I was not able to continue the scary dream after the leg problem resolved enough to finally resume sleeping. Who knows! I may still be stuck in some terrorist compound with my comrade and a prisoner. My golfing partners wish this were true.

But this story is not finished. During the "cramping" period, my wife was also suddenly awakened and filled me in about her dream! Hers seemed more urgent! Somehow her pressing need to tell her story ended my painful howling! Actually, her nightmare was no more realistic than mine. But here goes!

My wife's story involved using a large, white, sport utility vehicle with a front grill consisting of a cow-catcher-like frame, much like many locomotives had mounted on the front to apparently encourage free-range cattle to separate themselves from the train track bed. She was using this automobile to shuttle people about in the Wabash area for whatever reason.

The dream took place in the middle of a cold winter, compounded by blowing snow that covered the woods.

It was about 12 inches deep, navigation was difficult.

After delivering her riders, she plowed through the snow on Highway #124 past Mount Etna on her way back home. When reaching the stop-light at the intersection of Highway 5 North of Warren, she couldn't believe her eyes. Visible through the blustering snowflakes were multiple water heaters lined up along the road next to the cemetery fence.

Then the most unusual thing happened. These seemingly, harmless, robot-like appliances started to explode! It started with one, then another and another in a steady, synchronized progression. The only thing missing was coordinated, musical accompaniment. But then the noisy wind would have drowned out those sound effects.

Many questions invaded her mind at that time. Had terrorism reached our township? Did George DeWeese have a new way of disposing of used inventory? Was this an attempt by the highway department to discourage truck drivers from bypassing the local weigh station by closing a road?

To validate this occurrence, she recognized a local mail carrier who was also an eye witness at the scene. Perry Spahr was standing beside his automobile at a safe distance away while the repetitive explosions fired away. She couldn't tell what his take was about the situation. She could only speculate. Possibly he was disturbed about the littering incident or disgusted that this was causing an interruption to his delivery schedule. It was snowing so hard that communication with him was not an option.

So after all the water heaters had met their demise, she continued traveling east to Plum Tree where yet another explosion had happened in a home. Her dream became more weird! Injured people on the ground were being treated by firemen, EMT, and first responders. Since it was evident that all the wounded were being cared for, she proceeded homeward, hopefully to keep from becoming snowbound and in need of assistance herself.

Again her big, white SUV was able to gain passage around this second horrendous event and she arrived home safely.

Obviously, her dream antedated 2015.

Two emotional nightmares within one family on the same night had to be the result of something that was served at dinner. Will check last night's menu!

Conclusion: For once an excruciating leg cramp was beneficial in preventing further emotional trauma for TWO PEOPLE from TWO DREAMS!

P.S. I recently heard that pickle juice is a successful remedy for the cramping of muscles. So keep a bottle beside the bed. But ration yourself so that your skin doesn't turn bumpy and pickle green!

HP SPORTS

STAYING ON TRACK DURING THE HOLIDAYS

The holidays definitely impact SHEs (Sidetracked Home Executives). Because we're creative, we can go into OPM (Over Production Mode). Our perfectionism kicks in and we want to recreate the magic we see on glossy magazine covers without thinking about how fake it all is.

We SHEs love the holidays, and since we're easily distracted throughout the year, this time of year can pitch us over the festive edge.

The holidays don't let us off the hook when it comes to the work involved in running a household. Imagine that you have a half hour specifically slotted for housework. You've got four 3x5 cards with specific chores on each to direct your work (if you're on the SHE system). There's an estimated time telling you how long each task will take written on each card. You're dressed for housework, so you won't wreck your good clothes and you've got sensible shoes on.

According to your math, you can do the tasks on the cards in half an hour, but what has happened to your good intentions when you find yourself at the mall buying Christmas presents?

You can find that out by thinking backward until you come to the point in your housecleaning that prompted the diversion. Maybe you were innocently dusting the dining room table with a couple weeks' worth of mail stacked on it and when you went to move the mail to dust you saw the coupon for 25% off Christmas pajamas at Nordstrom, and the sale ends today! So much for housecleaning, but at least you have some gifts to wrap.

If you are a champion at getting sidetracked read on, because there is a wonderful anti-sidetracking tool you can use and it's located in your head (well actually in your throat). You can read all about it at the end of this essay.

If you're tired of being a victim of distractions here are ten you need to be aware of before you start any housework whether it's during the holidays or any time.

1. Cell phone
2. Door bell
3. Pet
4. Refrigerator
5. Sun
6. Mailman or UPS guy
7. Physiological interruptions: bathroom, thirst, hunger
8. Computer games/ Face Book/ Twitter
9. Child or husband
10. Your amazing mind

If you've been sidetracked in the past by any of these distractions, here's what you can do. When you set your timer for 15 minutes and plan to clean the refrigerator for example, promise yourself you are going to stay on task short of an emergency like a broken arm, a fire in the next room or a drone takes the top of your roof off. Once the vow is made, work fast and play with your time constraint. (Seeing how much you can get accomplished in 15 minutes will engage your inner child who loves races against time.)

There's no guarantee that one of the distractions won't occur, in fact, most likely one or more of them will crop up especially if the job at hand starts to get boring. No worries, you'll be ready!

So, let's say something in the fridge speaks to you, like a left-over chicken leg and the thought comes to your amazing mind, 'I'm kinda hungry.' Speak to the chicken part and say, "Shut up!

It's not time to eat! I'll eat you later." If that dialogue works, keep cleaning the refrigerator. If it starts to nag you or another food item tempts you, it's time to bring out the big gun. The ultimate and tried and true solution is the air horn (you know the sound of the horn at a basketball game). Now in the course of the 15-minute fridge clean-out you may have to use that obnoxious horn more than once, but it's such a brutal sound and it's hard on your vocal chords, so your sweet soul probably won't want to hear it more than once.

You can also use the air horn while at the grocery store when you're tempted to put a package of Christmas ginger snaps in your cart for example. (If there happens to be someone in the cookie aisle when you blast the horn, just touch your throat and say, "I hate it when that happens," and continue shopping.

Happy Holidays!

today's lesson or field trip or using Pinterest to share ideas and student work.

Seventy-one percent of teens use more than one social media site already, according to recent Pew research. However getting comfortable using these tools in a more formal capacity can have real world implications for students, as more industries and professions require social media proficiency.

Making Music

Students and teachers of music know the varied benefits of a high-quality arts education. Learning music can help develop math and pattern recognition skills, increase coordination and foster left brain development, according to the National Association for Music Education. Be sure your tools of the trade are up to the task.

For students learning to play a keyboard, be sure their instrument features the same sound quality as a traditional piano, but with the additional benefits a higher-tech option brings.

For example, the Privia PX-160 from Casio, an 88-key digital piano that boasts the sound of a 9-foot concert grand, features left and right audio outputs, making it easy to connect to other devices for external amplification or recording purposes. Additional features include dual headphone jacks, 18 authentic piano tones, duet mode, a USB port and a two-track recorder. Whether you are outfitting a home or a classroom with musical instruments, additional information can be found at CasioMusicGear.com.

Noise Canceling Headphones

Peace and quiet are not always available during crunch time, particularly for students with many siblings, or college students living in a dorm room. Help scholars achieve greater serenity with a good set of noise canceling headphones that don't compromise the quality of the audio.

Classroom Revamp

Many schools are looking to go green and save some money while upgrading technology. By combining a laser and LED light source, Casio's LampFree projectors are a unique, high-brightness, mercury-free tool that uses half the amount of power per unit than its traditional lamp-based counterparts. They save educators time and money because they require minimal maintenance and eliminate the cost of replacement lamps, as they have a 20,000 hour lifespan.

The XJ-F210WN model features Intelligent Light Control, which senses ambient light in the room and automatically adjusts the

HOW TO ADD A UNIQUE TWIST TO YOUR HOLIDAY DÉCOR THIS SEASON

(StatePoint) We all love our holiday traditions, and that includes the way we deck the halls -- from special ornaments to favorite festive wreaths. However, you may be looking for ways to revamp the tried-and-true look, especially when entertaining friends and family.

Here are some unique ideas for adding a twist to your usual holiday decorating routine.

Mix and Match
 Add dynamism and vitality to your home by infusing older, vintage elements that you've had and enjoyed for years with more modern pieces that speak to you today.

You can also breathe new life into these items by using them differently this year -- for example, moving your favorite garland from the bannister to the mantel, or hanging a wreath on a wall instead of a door.

Think Scent
 When many people plan their holiday decorations, they start with visuals. Why not try mixing it up by focusing on fragrance first? Scent is closely associated with memory, so adding holiday fragrances to your home allows you to both build new memories for future seasons and reflect on happy times in the past. For inspiration, draw on the vibrant spirit and brisk weather that the holidays bring.

Use candles to add a finishing touch to a holiday gathering. They also make for a great host or hostess gift.

Check out the new holiday fragrance lineup from Yankee Candle, which offers both classic favorites, as well as new modern takes on traditional themes. Fragrances include "All is Bright," a blend of citrus on warm musk, "Bubbly Pomegranate," a mix of juicy berries, pomegranate and citrus, "Alpine Martini," a tart concoction spiked with mountain berries and fresh snipped pine, and "Christmas Thyme," a lemongrass and thyme scent that's mingled with sandalwood and musk. For holiday inspiration, visit www.YankeeCandle.com.

Get Cozy
 Incorporate wintry throw pillows, quilts and blankets into living areas. Fabrics like table runners and tapestries can also add warmth around the house. Crank up the fireplace. Be sure that all your efforts work to combat the brisk season with a touch of coziness.

Beautiful Tablescapes
 When hosting guests, don't just set the table, create an impressive and unforgettable tablescape. One sleek and modern way to do so is to add candles, tumblers, vases, ornamental table toppers, fresh greens and seasonal flowers.

Tumbler candles, such as those from Yankee Candle, come in various sizes and designs, so you can stagger the heights for eye-catching appeal. Consider using their Pure Radiance candles that feature a crackling LumiWick, creating a soothing sound that evokes a fireside.

This season, add fragrance, beauty, and brightness to your home with unique twists on traditional holiday themes.

TOP TIPS FOR HOLIDAY FAMILY ROAD TRIPS

(StatePoint) The holiday season is one of the busiest travel times of the year, which means congested roads under potentially difficult driving conditions. To keep holiday road warriors comfortable and content on their drives, Autotrader editors offer some of their top holiday travel tips.

- Tune up. Do a quick check on the essentials before you head out. Check the wear and pressure on your tires, and be sure your fluids (oil, coolant and wiper fluid) are topped off. For do-it-yourselfers, you can perform these quick and easy inspections on your own. For added peace of mind, visit your local mechanic or dealership where you can have your car serviced by an accredited technician. Tending to potential issues proactively means you are more likely to avoid having to deal with them while you're on the road.

- Avoid "are we there yet"? Technology features like built-in screens and DVD players can be saviors on the road, but if your car doesn't come equipped with these, consider bringing along a handheld device so kids can play games or watch videos. And if technology isn't your thing, remember that magnetized board games and word games can work just as well. You can also encourage kids to stay occupied by having them help you navigate and by playing DJ.

- Have patience. These days, your car's navigation tools can offer realistic travel times, but be prepared for the unexpected. Inclement weather, traffic and bathroom requests can set you back. Give yourself extra time to reach your destination.

- Have fun! Holiday road trips can be a great pastime for the whole family while creating wonderful memories. Enjoy the adventure of it!
