Thought for the Week: Everyone is born with genius, but most people only keep it a few minutes. Edgard Varese

HONORED FOR 55 YEARS

On June 6, 2019, the United Methodist Memorial Home Board of Trustees recognized Barbara A. Souder (pictured right) for her 55 years of service to the organization. Barbara is licensed as a Registered Nurse and has held various Administrative leadership roles throughout her career. She has the longest tenure as an R.N. in the Corporation.

Rev. James D. Jones (pictured above), President of the Board of Trustees, presented a Resolution of Appreciation and plaque to Barbara during the Employee Recognition program. She received a standing ovation from those in attendance as she is loved by residents and staff alike.

Barbara exemplifies a nurse's heart and the hands of Christ as she serves faithfully year after year. Her dedication and service has been paramount to the success of the Corporation.

The United Methodist Memorial Home does business as Heritage Pointe of Warren, Heritage Pointe of Huntington, and Heritage Pointe of Fort Wayne. For more information, visit our website at ummh.org

MOTIVATING YOUR KIDS TO DO MORE

from the American Counseling Association

Kids can be amazing. They develop new cell phone apps, set athletic records, volunteer with the elderly, and perform lots of good deeds. Unfortunately, much of the time it seems these are someone else's children.

For many parents, the reality is kids sleeping till noon, buried in video games or so busy monitoring social media that they only surface for meals. This is even more obvious now with kids on summer vacation and no longer disappearing to school where we at least assume they are accomplishing something positive.

So how can a parent get the child in their home to be more active, or at least to contribute more to the household? A first step in that direction is simply to decide what your realistic expectations are for your child. If there are constant arguments and shouting about what isn't being done, what actions by your child would limit those arguments and make you all feel better?

The answer lies in specific goals, not just broad generalizations. Your starting point should be to negotiate some activities with your kids that will achieve something worthwhile and specific for your home and your child. You want to replace inactivity with positive accomplishment.

One simple goal might be to have your child take on one or more household chores. Maybe unloading the dishwasher, walking the dog each evening, or doing thirty minutes of yard work each day. Or it might be a positive growth activity, like reading books or getting a certain amount of daily exercise. It helps to have a structure for these activities. Set specific times or deadlines for when required activities are to be accomplished.

Step two is to provide motivation to help them want to complete the assigned chores. A negative motivation might be to cut off electronic gadget access until the assigned activity is completed.

Or a positive reward motivation could be getting an allowance, or an increase in a current allowance. If a desired reward is a major purchase, you can keep a running record of successful accomplishments with a clear goal of what's needed to earn that purchase.

The key is to develop specific activities that move your kids in desired directions and that make them feel good about doing required activities, even the most boring ones. Chores shouldn't be punishments, but rather activities that contribute positively to the family, household, and child him or herself.

FARMER'S MARKET

The original Warren Farmer's Market is still held on Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. till noon at Jeff's Farm Market, 627 E. 1st St. in Warren.

Each week, the market features farm fresh produce. Currently, super-sweet cantaloupe and Cannonball seedless watermelon are on hand. Fresh South Carolina peaches, Kentucky vine-ripe tomatoes and Indiana organic strawberries are arriving this week.

Homemade baked goods are generally available from local vendors and Jeff's Farm Market carries Walnut Creek Amish Fried Pies for your sweet tooth.

Specialty items on hand include Kentucky award-winning Broadbent Country Cured Ham and Bacon as well as pure Indiana Maple Syrup.

Check out our Facebook page (Warren Farmers Market) weekly for new arrivals and latest specials. Vendors are always welcome – no charge for space.

MEETING CHANGE

The Warren Town Council has rescheduled the Regular Meeting of July 8 to now be held on July 15. The meeting, as always, will be held at Assembly Hall, 131 N. Wayne St at 5:00 PM.

GARDEN EVENTS

Helping Hands Community Garden has some upcoming events for the public. Saturday, June 22 will be Yoga in the Garden, a continuation of our Saturdays in the Garden, occurring on the 4th Saturday of each month through October. There will be 2 classes, the first one at 10 am and the second at 11 am. There will be a $5 fee for adults and $2 fee for children 12 and under. This is for beginners and seasoned yoga enthusiasts alike.

Regular Harvest hours will begin in July. Hours are Mondays 4-6pm, Wednesdays 11am-2pm, and the 4th Saturday of each month 10 am – noon.

If you would like to be involved with the Community Garden, contact Becky Arnett at (260)358-4826 or by email at arnett1@purdue.edu.

FOOD MINISTRY

Healing Waters "Come to the Table" food pantry will be open June 20th from 4 to 7pm.

It is free and open to the community. There will be no food pantry in July, but we will return in August. Have a safe and blessed summer.

Healing Waters Ministry is located at 5811 W 606 S, Huntington {Mt.Etna}, In. 46750

HOMESPUN MARKET

Homespun Market will be open until 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 5. Visit us before the parade. On Saturday July 6 at 8:00 a.m. many of our vendors will be participating in the town wide garage sale by having booths here in our grass area. Homespun will also be open!

We are so excited that True Envy Boutique has expanded its selection of clothing at Homespun. Owner Dawn Conwell chooses the cutest items for all ages in all sizes.

There are tops, slacks, purses, shoes, cardigans, cover ups, camisoles and some jewelry. Come check it out!

We are thrilled to partner with 30 vendors and there's always room for more! Remember to shop local for special occasion gift ideas.

Many of the items in our store can be personalized for bridal showers, weddings, birthdays, anniversaries, newborn babies and funeral keepsakes. Call us at 375-3200 or 260-228-0390 with questions or orders.

Don't forget to check out our Facebook page.

Homespun Market at 427 North Matilda Street in Warren.....Hours are Wednesday and Friday from 10-6 and Saturday from 9-2.

The Indiana State Department of Agriculture is now accepting submissions for the 12th annual Indiana agriculture photo contest. The contest is open to Indiana residents and was created to recognize the hard work and contributions of Hoosier farmers, as well as the beauty of the state's agricultural landscape.

The winners will be invited to attend a special ceremony at the Indiana State Fair, where they will be recognized and receive certificates from Lt. Governor Suzanne Crouch and Indiana State Department of Agriculture Director Bruce Kettler.

"You don't have to be a professional photographer to enter this contest," Crouch said. "We encourage anyone who recognizes the importance and beauty of agriculture, to participate."

Contestants can submit up to five photos in digital format. Each photo must be taken within the state, accompanied by an entry form and fall under one of the following categories: Agritourism, Conservation, Faces of Agriculture or On the Farm.

In total, ten winners will be selected: two from each category and two overall.

"Every photo tells a story, and ours, in Indiana, revolves around agriculture," Kettler said. "This contest is a great way to showcase the importance of this industry, as well as the individuals who make it possible year after year."

Photos will be evaluated based on creativity, composition and category representation. Entries must be submitted by 5:00 p.m. (ET) on June 30, 2019.

Visit www.in.gov/isda/2468.htm for entry forms, guidelines and criteria.

LINCOLN REUNION

The 8th Swan Street Lincoln Grade School Reunion will be held for everyone who went to Lincoln School on Swan Street in Huntington. The Reunion will be held Saturday, July 13th, 2019 from 1-4pm in the New Lincoln School Building, 2037 East Taylor St, Huntington.

Bring pictures and any items you have to share from your years at Lincoln. We are going to have lunch, a delicious one. Please bring crock pot food. We will have plenty of plug ins but no kitchen. Covered dishes will be good along with snacks and desserts. Please, no Alcoholic beverages. Tea and water will be provided. We are going to purchase some Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Table service will be provided.

We are using the internet, Warren Weekly and The Tab newspapers, also by word of mouth, to let people know about this reunion. Spread the word.

P.S. the school will open at noon to set up and close to take down at 4pm to clean up.

If you can help clean up it would be great! Questions: Call Karen at 260.375.2173.

DEAN'S LIST

Dean College is pleased to announce that Abigail Martz of Van Buren has earned a place on the Dean's List for the Spring 2019 semester.

Founded in 1865, Dean College is a private, residential college located in Franklin Massachusetts, 45 minutes from Boston, Massachusetts, and Providence, Rhode Island. Dean College offers baccalaureate degrees, associate degree programs, as well as a robust schedule of part-time continuing and professional education credit and certificate programs throughout the calendar year.

TOUGH AG DECISIONS

Persistent rain across Indiana continues to delay spring planting for Indiana's farmers. As the rain continues, the possibility of fields left unplanted becomes a reality and Indiana's farmers and agribusiness professionals are faced with many tough decisions. Indiana Farm Bureau, the largest general farm organization in the state, spoke with farmers across the state about the complications surrounding this year's unprecedented planting season.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's May 28 report, only 22% of Indiana's corn crop and 11% of its soybean crop has been planted. Typically at this time, 85% of the corn crop and 63% of the soybean crop would be in the ground.

This delay in planting is the result of consistent rain across the state. In most areas, the soil has not had adequate time to dry, meaning farmers have not seen the conditions necessary to plant. While most of the Midwest is experiencing delayed planting, recent reports showed that Indiana is the furthest behind.

CELEBRATING 40 YEARS

Kent and Nora (Oyler) McCracken were married on Sunday, June 24, 1979 at Richland United Methodist Church, Converse, Indiana.

Kent and Nora raised their family on his family farm, where he grew up North of Van Buren. They were blessed with a daughter and son and four grandchildren: Tara and Eddie Whittington, Blake and Lauren of Wilkinson; and Brad and Ashly McCracken, Eli and Silas of Fort Wayne.

Kent recently retired from 36 years working as a Rural Mail Carrier for the U.S. Postal Service and Nora worked as a Legal Secretary. They both will continue to farm together and enjoy more time with their children and grandchildren.

Don Lamb of Lamb Farms, Inc. in Lebanon, Indiana, who has approximately 10% of his crops planted, said that this truly is an unprecedented spring for Indiana farmers.

"My dad has been a farmer for more than 50 years and he has never experienced this," said Lamb.

Bob Bishop of Bishop Farms in Leesburg, Indiana, who is more than halfway done with planting this year, echoes this statement. Bishop has been farming since 1972 and says while he's experienced some very wet springs, he's always seen conditions improve in May.

With June comes many deadlines and tough decisions. If planting continues into June, the crops will have a shorter growing season than ideal, and farmers will be forced to deal with many potential complications. This is particularly true for corn. For some, that simply means switching their seeds out for a shorter season hybrid. Bishop says he is already in the process of making that adjustment.

"I already sent back the 114-day corn to get some shorter season stuff," he explained. "The next hybrid we have is 111 day, but I'm thinking about getting 108 or 99-day corn."

June also brings deadlines for filing for prevented planting crop insurance. Insured farmers have the opportunity to file an insurance claim if they're unable to plant some or all of their land due to weather.

"At Farm Bureau, we worked hard to advocate for a Farm Bill that would maintain crop insurance and we're thankful that crop insurance remains an option for Indiana's farmers," said Randy Kron, INFB president. "It's going to be critical this year."

Alternately, in order to qualify for the current administration's trade aid, farmers will only receive financial assistance on the land that they attempt to plant this spring. However, farmers have very few details about this aid package at this time, leaving them with much uncertainty as they weigh their options moving forward.

For some—especially the farmers who have yet to begin planting—utilizing these services may be the most economical option, but for others, they're determined to finish planting the crop at all costs.

John Carnahan of Carnahan and Sons in Vincennes, Indiana says they have no intention of leaving any ground unplanted. They say even if their yields this fall are far below their average, they still expect a planted crop to bring in more money than reliance on insurance would.

"We can make more on three quarters of the crop than we could through our insurance, so it's really not an option for us," he explained. "We are going to get it in the ground. We won't let it go unplanted." Bishop explains that even if fields are left unplanted this year, they still require maintenance.

"You've got to do something with it in the summer or you'll have a heck of a weed problem later," he said. "There are a few options but they'll cost money to do."

When the skies do break and farmers are able to continue planting, they will be in a rush to complete the job. Lana Walpe, who farms in Fowler, Indiana described a recent scenario where she and her husband, Steve, worked into the early morning on a day that allowed them access to their fields.

"There's a lot of talking with God and staying up until 1:30 in the morning to get your crop in."

The effects of this planting season could be detrimental to an already strained agriculture industry. While not ideal, most farmers do have several options awaiting them, but for many agribusiness professionals, that is not the case.

"There are a lot of ramifications for the ag industry, as much or even more than for individual farmers," said Lamb. "I am thankful that there are insurance options for us but they're not available for everyone."

Lamb is referring to the many agribusiness professionals who rely on a productive farming season as a core part of their business.

Jeff Demerly is the owner of Demerly Ag Plus, a seed dealership and agronomy service in Wolcott, Indiana. For Demerly, and the many other seed dealers and small agribusinesses across the state, a spring with less seeds planted means a less profitable year.

If a farmer is not able to plant a bag of seed that is purchased, it can be returned to the dealer. The dealer would then return that seed to the manufacturer if there is no other demand for the product.

"If I send back a bag of corn, I don't get credit for that from a sales perspective," said Demerly. "Let's say worst case scenario no more than 30% of my seeds are planted, that means 70% of my business is in jeopardy."

Seed dealers aren't the only businesses in jeopardy. If farmers are not able to get the majority of their crop in the ground this year, other agribusinesses, from retail to processing, will feel the strain of an underproductive farm economy.

"It's the small mom and pop ag businesses that are supporting your community that are in jeopardy," said Demerly. "If things don't turn around, it's the self-employed ag entrepreneur that's not going to be able to invest back into the economy."

Beyond agriculture, adjacent businesses, such as steel and fuel, also are starting to feel the effects.

"The concerns are real for Indiana's rural communities," said Kron. "What our farmers feel now, the rest of our communities feel later. But if we can get more of our crop in the ground over the next couple of weeks, we can minimize the negative effects of this planting season."

One glimmer of hope comes in the form of higher corn prices and many farmers are taking advantage of those prices by selling some of what they have remaining from last year's crop. However, if the price of corn continues to increase, that could have negative effects on livestock operations that use the corn for feed.

"Farmers are in a tough place right now and are faced with many unknowns, but they're exceptional business men and women and they're optimistic by nature," said Kron.

"You have to be the eternal optimist to be a farmer. Who knows what the rest of the year is going to bring," added Carnahan. "We could get plenty of rain once the crop is in and still have a decent year."
