Thought for the Week: Son, always tell the truth. Then you'll never have to remember what you said the last time. Sam Rayburn

BREAKFAST PLANNED

Van Buren Fire Department's Annual All You Can Eat Pancake and Sausage Breakfast will be held Sat. Aug 16 starting at 7am until 11am. Cost is $7.

POWER OUT

The power outages in the Warren area during the past Friday, August 1st, were due to problems within the I&M (AEP) transmission lines and not within the local distribution system. An automatic switch was opening causing periodic interruptions which affected this entire area including REMC.

For customers of the Warren Municipal Electric Utility, the August 1st bill saw an annual adjustment to the per KW charge with the cost per KW being approximately one cent less. The annual adjustment is made to reflect the prior twelve months of fuel tracker rates included in the I&M billing schedule to the Warren Electric Utility. The average per month cost of purchased power from I&M(AEP) to the local utility is approximately $111,000.

MARKET REPORT

Farmers Market will be open this Saturday from 8-11 am. So come and do all your fresh produce shopping with us. There will be tomatoes, green beans, corn, eggplant, squash, cucumbers and much more! There will also be baked goods.

There is a new vendor coming and they are the Roanoke Knit Chicks. They are a non-denominational charity knitting group that meets in the basement of a church in Roanoke once a week year round. "We donate hats, scarves, mittens, and baby items to local (surrounding area of Roanoke) shelters and charities. Last year we were able to donate items to the Warren food pantry and plan to do that again this fall. During the summer, we sell our items at Farmer's markets to earn money to buy more yarn. In the fall, we donate the items that we have not sold. Over the years, we have donated thousands of items to groups such as Warren Food Pantry, Malta House, Love Inc., Christ Child, Fort Wayne Shelters, Cancer treatment centers, and Veterans Homes. As our group has grown, our need for yarn has grown."

So come out and support your local farmers and the Roanoke Knit Chicks!

EVENING SERVICES

Within the next few weeks, Citizens Telephone will be starting a fiber optic project in Warren. It is our goal to provide phone, internet, and TV service thru a buried fiber optic network to be implemented in the future.

Work will start soon in the alleys in town to get the initial conduit deployed. Contractors will use a variety of trenchless methods and plan to minimize actual digging. In ground vaults will be placed and we hope to eventually eliminate the above ground green boxes. Please give our office a call if you have questions. 375-2111

WORK SCHEDULED

Beginning the week of August 4th, employees of Commonwealth Engineering will begin measuring and checking for drainage or any other issues in preparation for paving of all traveled alleys. Residents living in proximity to alleys which are stone covered will see more activity then those living near alleys already paved as more foundation work will be necessary prior to paving. Alleys already paved will also see work done. The project is currently scheduled to be completed prior to winter. More information will be made available when engineering and scheduling is done.

KUDOS, KICKS & KARATS

THE UPTOWN GARDENER

by Ruth Herring

I'll recap a bit of last weeks cliff hanger. I was writing about my grandpa taking a stranger to work in Wabash after the Andrews bank had been robbed and a suspect is at large.

My grandpa made his way through the back streets of Andrews making his way to Wabash. His passenger was very quite which is a good thing because my grandpa didn't really like anyone talking to him while he was driving, but evidently my grandpa was kinda excited about the bank robbery because they just don't have that much excitement in Andrews and was talking to the passenger the whole way to Wabash. According to my grandpa his passenger wasn't to interested in talking about bank robberies.

As the "getaway" car was making its way to Wabash, an undercover officer from the Wabash City police heard of the report of the 62 ford falcon and was watching for it to come by him. As the car went by him he pulled out and followed behind at a safe distance. The police officer then realized that it was the car in question and radioed ahead to set up a road block.

When grandpa seen the road block ahead, he mentioned to his passenger that it looks like we had an accident up there, and he seemed to agree. As they got closer grandpa realized it was a road block and became a little concerned, remembering the county sheriff passing them on their road as they left the house, he was thinking to himself that he was pretty sure he had their bank robber. So he pushed her up a little on the speedometer so they got there a little faster. As they approached the road block his passenger didn't say a word nor did he have a chance to because they had 5 to 7 guns pointed right at him. They opened the door and jerked the passenger right out to the ground and hand cuffed him.

As grandpa walked around the car to see what they were doing to him, the bank robber/passenger asked grandpa " Bert, can you help me out a little?" My grandpa just turned around and walked away. That was probably the first and only time my grandpa ever turned his back on anyone, but he knew it was best.

Grandpa became quite notorious for his little jaunt to Wabash that day. Reporters from Marion, Huntington, Wabash, and Fort Wayne all had to have the scoop on the story. Even the Chicago tribune caught wind of the story and put a little paragraph in their paper to.

As for the robbers, the man who attempted the bank robbery was actually on parole from serving a 10 year sentence for bank robbery. Now he was charged with the Kokomo bank robbery and the attempted bank robbery of Andrews and possibly the robbery of the convenience store in Wabash. The real kicker of the story is this same man pitched hay for grandpa one summer with his brothers when they were younger. As for the stranger/wheelman/passenger that grandpa took to Wabash, he served his time and was never seen or heard of again. As I think back, the kid made two very important life decisions that day a bad one by driving the getaway car for the bank robber and then the good one, getting away from the bank robbery and when he wrecked the getaway car he

AREA NEWS

BLOOD DRIVE

The American Red Cross calls on eligible donors with all blood types to help maintain a sufficient blood supply this summer.

The American Red Cross encourages all eligible blood donors to make an appointment to donate blood soon to help prevent a shortage.

During the summer months, on average, about two fewer donors give blood at each Red Cross blood drive than what is needed to meet the needs of patients. Vacations and summer activities are among the reasons regular donors may not find the time to give. But, patients don't get a vacation from needing blood - the need is constant.

As a national network, the Red Cross has a unique responsibility to help ensure blood is available for patients whenever and wherever it is needed. By donating blood or platelets through the Red Cross, donors may be helping patients in their community or patients across the nation.

Red blood cells have a shelf life of only 42 days and platelets just five days, so they must constantly be replenished.

To learn more and make an appointment to donate blood, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS.

Upcoming Drives:

Saturday, August 9 from 7:00 a.m. until 11:00 a.m. at Dillman Church, 8888 South 1100 W 90 in Warren.

SENIOR SCRAMBLE

Results from Thursday, July 31st at Dogwood Glen. First Place(30): Doug Davis, Dick Lintner, John Morrison, Lou Morrison. Closest to the Pin #3 Ralph Taylor. Long Drive #8 Rob Marsh & Charles Forrester.

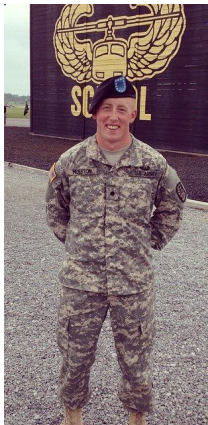

Congratulations to Randy Potter who had a Hole-in-One on

POOL TOURNAMENT

There were 21 residents in the August 1st pool tournament at Heritage Pointe. The winners were Carl Hubbard and Norm Hiser. Second place went to Mel Dooley and Bill Couch. In the first game, Norm sunk 4 balls on the break, 3 striped and 1 solid. He then sank 3 more balls before missing the last one. They wound up losing that game!!

The in-house play is held every Friday at 1:30 in the Fults recreation room, however, this week it will be on Thursday due to a special program on Friday.

GRADUATES

Andrew R. Hueston has graduated from the U.S. Army Air Assault School and earned the honor of wearing the Air Assault Badge.

The 10-day course of instruction focuses on combat assault operations involving Army helicopter warfare operations associated with hands-on, performance-oriented training. The physically and mentally demanding training includes a nine-station obstacle course, a two-mile run in Army boots, and phases in combat assault operations, sling-load rigging and inspection of prepared lift loads, and tower and helicopter rappelling fast rope operations. Students are familiarized with the capabilities, knowledge and recognition of Army helicopters, aircraft, airborne and airmobile operations, set up of parachute and landing zones, safety procedures, and aeromedical evacuation operations.

Students must complete a 12-mile foot march in three hours or less wearing the prescribed uniform with weapon, equipment and a 30-pound backpack. The foot march is a graded task and a graduation requirement of the air assault course, designed to test strength, stamina and endurance.

Hueston is the son of Richard E. Hueston of Anderson, Ind. and grandson of Don Deemer of Warren, Ind. and grandson of Larry Hueston of Alexandria, Ind. He is a 2012 graduate of Anderson High School, Anderson, Ind.

DOMINOS PLAYERS

There were five players this week in the Wednesday afternoon domino tournament with scores ranging from 24 for the winner and 36 for the high score. The low winning score was achieved by "Clancy" Myers at 22. The high scorer was "Engineer" Ruble at 36 points. The other players included "Curly" Taylor with 28 points, & Loren Hall with 30 points. "Sawdust" Minnich was disqualified with 14 points for starting 4 games late, which was apparently due to a LONG after lunch snooze.

The Monday tournament was won by "Sawdust" Minnich who won 3 games, with 26 points, followed by "Corncob" Hinton and "Engineer" Ruble with 28 points each. "Curly" Taylor & "Captain" Hall tied with 31 each. The High scorer was Richard Bonham at 36 with no games won, followed by "Clancy" Myers with 35. "Clancy" even won a game without ever starting his own train, and "Engineer" won with only his engine in the round a bout and a blank train!!

MUSEUM EXPANSION

Born into a poor family, all Red Skelton wanted to do from a young age was to make people laugh. A century later, just a block away from his boyhood home, the newly expanded Red Skelton Museum of American Comedy at Vincennes University stands as a testament that Red certainly achieved that goal.

The Museum's Phase II expansion was recognized with a grand opening celebration on July 26 and focuses on Skelton's extensive career as an entertainer. The Museum first opened in 2013 with exhibits that showcased many of Skelton's original characters, made popular during the 20-year run of The Red Skelton Show on television.

The celebration also included a performance by Red Skelton impersonator Tom Mullica in the adjacent Red Skelton Performing Arts Center's 800-seat theatre. A close friend of Red's, Mullica portrayed some of Red's loveable characters, including the Mean Widdle Kid, George Appleby, Clem Kadiddlehopper, and Freddie the Freeloader.

With a comedy career that spans from Vaudeville, to radio, to television, and the movies, the Red Skelton Museum of American Comedy honors America's most beloved clown with exhibits that illustrate his life and times. I like the continuity of it, I like the excitement of it, and I love the interaction, said Lothian Skelton, Red's widow, about the exhibits in the Museum. She has graciously donated some $5 million worth of Skelton's costumes, props, awards, and memorabilia to the Museum.

While the museum appeals to persons who remember watching Red on TV or the movies, it also educates and entertains those too young to have experienced him firsthand. It was neat to see what Grandpa watched when he was a kid, said one of the younger visitors.

The new addition features more interactive exhibits and is designed to appeal to a wide age range. Visitors learn about Red's comedy through such hands-on activities as creating radio sound effects. A green screen projects patrons onto Red's stage to act out one of his comedy routines.

People can participate and be a part of it instead of just looking and seeing, Lothian Skelton said.

The Red Skelton Museum of American Comedy and Vincennes University will continue to preserve Skelton's legacy of laughter. The fact that this is part of the Vincennes University campus - this, to me, is going to be the success and the reason this will endure. This is very important, Lothian continued. "We all work together here. I've become very attached to the people of Vincennes and I'm very grateful.

A sampling of the views of visitors indicate that the museum has a bright future:

- * It's not just for today, it's for tomorrow.
- * You have to inspire a young mind. You have to look to the future.
- * It's just fantastic.
- * They've done a fantastic job with the museum. It's Red; it just tells his whole story.

* I like the fact that they have the TV screens there so you can watch clips of him since you don't usually get to see them as reruns on television. So that's kind of nice because people who aren't familiar with Red's characters can see him in action.

* Red...he wouldn't believe it. His house was right across the street on Lyndale Avenue there. As a little boy he was so poor.

About the Museum

The Red Skelton Museum of American Comedy is designed to preserve and share the legacy of Vincennes native Red Skelton, an internationally recognized entertainer whose talents included comedy, pantomime, painting, composing, and writing. Located adjacent to the $20 million Red Skelton Performing Arts Center on the campus of Vincennes University, the Museum provides a showcase for some of the $5 million collection of Skelton's costumes, props, awards, and memorabilia, that have been donated by his widow, Lothian Skelton.

About Red Skelton

Widely recognized as one of the pioneers of television in the 1950s, Red Skelton had one of the longest runs of any television program, a 20-year, top-rated show that brought to life many legendary characters, such as Freddie the Freeloader. His career also spanned radio, the movies, painting, and musical composition. Born in Vincennes in 1913, Skelton died in 1997 and is remembered as one of the nation's most beloved entertainers.

TEACHING KIDS TO GIVE BACK

(BPT) - One of the most rewarding reasons to get involved in your community is to set a good example for your kids. Whether you donate money or time, giving back is beneficial, and not just for the recipients. The reward for your selfless acts can be a beautiful thing for both your community and your children's future. But what are some of the ways you can teach kids to give back and what age should you begin encouraging them?

Giving back is just as much about volunteering as it is about philanthropy. Dr. Lois Winchell, child and family therapist at Argosy University, Sarasota, believes it should be a combination of both. "If we want our children to give back, our families need to be involved in multiple activities," says Winchell. "These include volunteering resources and time and giving money when possible. Learning how to donate time can be a very powerful lesson for children because it is a giving of ourselves. This intimate experience can be significant and can often reap a more personal reward than the offering of money and things."

As with everything else in life, kids learn best by example. The closer you can bring your child to the recipient of the gift, the more personal the experience becomes.

"Nurturing a sense of giving and making sure this is a value for your children starts as early as age 3 or 4," says Winchell. "At this developmental age, we can teach them that others have feelings and that your child has an impact on those feelings. This sense of empathy is the underpinning of charity. The most significant impact on our children is what they actually see us doing as it relates to a giving spirit. As we engage in specific projects, we can have conversations with our children regarding why the project is important and who will benefit."

Start by expanding their sense of environment, from the immediate family to their local community and eventually the world around them. A sense of awareness of something greater than themselves is important in raising a compassionate individual. This sense of responsibility to others and the environment as a world citizen can be supported by making children aware of others' needs whether in visiting a shelter or a food bank with family members or simply helping younger siblings.

"From infancy to about 5 years old, children aren't necessarily capable of thinking outside of themselves. Even so, parents need to foster their child's sharing with others," says Winchell. As children grow older they can begin volunteering and supporting community projects more directly. Whether they donate toys to a children's shelter or simply participate in a walk for charity, these years are important for a child to learn the art of giving back. When they become teenagers, they can do even more for the community by assisting an elderly neighbor with his yard work or helping out at a local food bank or soup kitchen.

Additionally, it is important to convey the message that "giving back" does not include an expectation of getting something in return. Instead, highlight the sense of joy in being able to make someone happy and how those feelings are the greater gift.

"When a child experiences sharing and the serving of others, an internal sense of contentment and self-worth is experienced," says Winchell. "This self-enhancement and sense of belonging is coincident with their giving and results in a benefit that cannot be gained any other way. This sense of happiness and accomplishment then contributes to their positive sense of self." In other words, teaching kids to give back is one of the best things a parent can do for the community and the child.

SEVEN TIPS FOR A GREENER

BACK-TO-SCHOOL SEASON

(BPT) - With back-to-school shopping, changing schedules and preparing kids for the upcoming school year, your family's environmental impact may be the last thing on your mind.

It is possible to have a greener back-to-school season. Here are seven simple things parents and children can do to care for the environment - and themselves - as they return to school.

1. Reuse and recycle notebooks. While high schoolers may go through multiple notebooks per subject every year, it's rare for elementary school-aged kids to use up their notebooks. Tear out used pages (and recycle them, of course) from last year's notebooks so that kids can use the remaining blank pages. Use contact paper to freshen and reinforce covers that are worn or written on.

2. Give broken and worn down crayons new life. Gather all the bits and separate by color. Remove all papers. Using a mini-muffin pan (or mini ramekins in fun shapes), fill each cup with crayon pieces in one color. Melt in an oven set at 350 degrees just until crayons are completely melted. Cool at room temperature, then freeze for 30 minutes to make it easier to remove the newly formed crayons.

3. Refresh smelly shoes naturally. Stinky gym bags and tennis shoes don't have to be a reality for your athletic child, and you don't have to resort to chemicals to kill odor. You can create a natural deodorizing spray with essential oils. Simply mix 12 to 16 drops of lemon oil, six drops of red thyme oil and 2 drops of patchouli oil and 4 ounces of water in a misting bottle. Shake vigorously and mist inside gym bags and shoes. The formula not only kills odors, it adds an energizing, refreshing aroma.

4. Look for ways to green your commute to school. If you live close to school, consider walking or biking. Families with longer commutes may consider carpooling or using the school bus.

5. Green lunches by packing them in reusable lunch bags (no brown bags or plastic baggies, please). Pack sandwiches in reusable sandwich containers, and use bento-style boxes with multiple compartments to hold snacks, veggies and other sides. Replace plastic water bottles with reusable bottles - plenty of fun, colorful options are available.

6. Energize naturally. Do your kids grab a sugary soft drink or sweet snack to boost their awareness while doing homework? Instead of relying on unhealthy treats for an energy boost that will come with a crash afterward, energize homework time with an essential oil diffusion. Aura Cacia offers this mood-boosting blend:

Ingredients:
10 drops peppermint essential oil
3 drops eucalyptus essential oil
2 drops ginger essential oil

3 drops sweet orange essential oil

Directions:

Combine all oils in a mister bottle and spritz in the air around your child's work space. To give kids a boost during the school day, soak a cotton ball in the essential oils blend, slip it into a reusable plastic container and place in your child's book bag. Whenever he needs a burst of energy during the day, he can open it and take a quick whiff.

7. Lighten up your electricity use and carbon footprint. Get kids involved in a fun weekend project by replacing incandescent bulbs throughout the house with energy-efficient CFLs or LEDs. These bulbs give off the same amount of light for back-to-school tasks like homework or picking out a first-day outfit, but use about 80 percent less electricity and can last for eight or more years before needing replacement.

WHOLESOME SNACKS FOR

BACK TO SCHOOL

(BPT) - The school year is here and with it, all of those hectic schedules. You may think the chaos of another school year means you're too busy to provide your children with nourishing after-school snacks, but that doesn't have to happen. There are many easy recipes available that will allow you to provide wholesome and delicious snacks to your kids, and there are easy ways to be sure they enjoy them. Here are a few ideas.

Ask them to help
Your children will be more excited about eating a healthy after-school snack if they have a hand in its creation. Creating a garden vegetable tray is an easy way to let kids customize their snack to their own taste preferences. Smaller kids can organize the grape tomatoes while you cut the peppers, and when you're finished, you can all enjoy the snack together. This large recipe is perfect if your kids are bringing friends over. You could also create the tray on a Monday and then enjoy it all week long.

Garden vegetable tray

Ingredients

1 package Simply Organic Southwest Ranch Greek Yogurt Dip Mix
1 16-ounce package Stonyfield Plain Organic Nonfat Greek Yogurt
1 small zucchini, sliced
1 small yellow squash, sliced
1 pint grape tomatoes
1 medium jicama, peeled and sliced into sticks
1 orange bell pepper, seeded and sliced
1 green bell pepper, seeded and sliced
1 bunch of radishes
1 bunch green onions - about 10 - trimmed

1 head romaine lettuce, large leaves only for the base of the vegetable platter
1 red bell pepper
Instructions

Mix Simply Organic Southwest Ranch Greek Dip Mix with the 16-ounce package of Stonyfield Plain Organic Nonfat Greek Yogurt. Chill for 30 minutes.

Line a large tray or shallow dish with a decorative napkin and Romaine lettuce leaves.

Seed the red bell pepper by slicing off the top of the pepper, then pull out the membrane and seeds. Discard membrane and seeds, but keep the top for decoration.

Fill the hollow bell pepper with chilled Simply Organic Southwest Ranch Greek Dip and place in the center of the tray or dish.

Arrange corn, zucchini, yellow squash, grape tomatoes, jicama sticks, orange and green bell pepper, radishes and green onions around the red bell pepper dip cup.

Place toothpicks or skewers on nearby serving platter.

Hide healthy foods in delicious flavors

Sometimes the right presentation is all you need for your children to enjoy healthy snacks. This recipe for a banana, pineapple and orange smoothie hides nutritious fruit in a savory offering that feels more like a dessert. Just make sure your kids don't drink it too fast to ward off brain freeze.

was driving before he came to my grandparents house to get a ride to Wabash, he left his gun in the wrecked car. Yes it could have gotten real ugly that day, but I think the kid was just plum scared out of his wits and was looking for a way out.

Shortly after all of this happened, we decided it was time for grandma and grandpa to move to Warren to be closer to the family. They were getting up in their ages and was just needing a little extra help every now and then. It was very hard for grandpa to leave his house, he had lived there since he was 7 years old, but he willingly did.

Almost 9 years to the day of the robbery, July 16th 1985, we lost my Grandpa Forst. He was the rock of our family, the man who was a WWI vet, whom raced motorcycles, who raised a family of 6 children, who helped make kitchen cabinets for Bob Hope and Lucille Ball when he worked at Kitchen Maid and of course had his 15 minutes of fame with the "getaway car". He lived those 91 years of his life to the fullest and I can only hope that my life will be lived to the fullest like his was.

As I close this weeks column we would like to invite all of mom's faithful readers, friends, and family to an 80th birthday party for her to be held on Sunday August 17th from 2 to 5 in the Calico Lounge of Heritage Pointe or if you are unable to attend please send her a birthday greeting to Ruth Herring 801 Huntington Ave. Town House 5 Warren Indiana 46792.

Thank you from the bottom of our hearts for being so supportive of mom and her articles she writes. It means the world to all of us. As for me I will be back in October to confess to some of my pranks in my child hood days. Treva
