GSA WARNS OF SCAMS

The public is being warned to watch out for dangers posed by scam artists who would prey off the generosity of Americans wanting to donate money to the disaster relief efforts. To make sure donations get to hurricane victims, the General Services Administration (GSA) and the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) have put together these tips to protect the public:

* Beware of phony e-mails soliciting money on behalf of well-known charities. There are many web sites claiming to collect donations for Hurricane Katrina victims that may not be legitimate. FTC advises you to never click on any link in an e-mail solicitation because you may end up at a site that looks real but is set up by identity thieves to get confidential information. For example, if you get an e-mail from the Red-Cross, close the e-mail and instead go to the Red Cross Web site, or phone them.

* Donate to established charities or nationally known organizations. For a list of reputable organizations, visit http://www.FirstGov.gov and click on "How You Can Help."

* Donate to charities you have given to before.

* Watch out for charities that have sprung up overnight. They may be well-meaning, but may lack the infrastructure to provide assistance.

* Do not give out personal or financial information - including your Social Security number or credit card and bank account numbers - to anyone who solicits a contribution from you. Scam artists use this information to commit fraud against you.

* Do not give or send cash. For security and tax record purposes, contribute by check or credit card. Write the official name of the charity on your check.

Visit http://www.FirstGov.gov, the official web portal of the U.S. government to learn more about relief efforts and other important Hurricane Katrina information. And, if you'd rather speak to someone directly, just call toll-free 1(800)FED-INFO (that's 1-800-333-4636) 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

THE WEEKLY SPECIAL

by Helen @ Natalie Jeanne's This recipe has absolutely nothing to do with the Warren Farmer's Market, but the woman who shared it with me certainly does.

Nancy Smyth has been the backbone of the Farmer's Market since the idea was conceived several months ago at one of our Sunflower Cooperative meetings. At this particular meeting, Nancy expressed a desire to start a Farmer's Market in Warren. And so the seed was planted, and this seed blossomed into a beautiful flower.

It took months of work, most of which Nancy took on herself, and a commitment of several dedicated volunteers and generous citizens to make the dream of the Farmer's Market into a reality.

Without Nancy's devotion, the Farmer's Market would have never come to fruition, nor would it be the success that it is. Thank you, Nancy, for bringing a breath of fresh air (and fresh fruits and vegetables) to Warren. This cookie's for you!

Nancy Smyth's Cookie Recipe

- 2 cups butter
2 cups sugar
2 cups brown sugar
4 eggs
2 tsp vanilla
5 cups oats
4 cups flour
1 tsp salt
2 tsp baking soda
24 oz semi sweet chocolate
8 oz milk chocolate
3 cups nuts

Cream butter, sugar and brown sugar. Add eggs and vanilla. Mix in oats, flour, salt, and baking soda. Stir in chocolate chips and nuts. Form into balls and flatten on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 375 for 6 minutes. Makes 7 dozen cookies.

The Farmer's and Crafter's Market will continue through the fall as weather permits. Come check out the local produce and the local artists, too. Until next week, Bon Appetit!

FROM OURS TO THEIRS

Bourbon Street pies are flying out the door of Natalie Jeanne's Restaurant! Thanks to you, I had the privilege of donating $106.00 to our charities last week. That brings the grand total up to $232.00 since Sept. 1st. Natalie Jeanne's will continue to donate to the American Red Cross and Noah's Wish for the rest of the year, so it's not too late to contribute!! Thanks again for your support.

COME SING WITH US

KIDS' CLUB

The Warren United Methodist Church will be starting Kids' Club on September 14th and continuing every Wednesday thru November 16th. The theme is "Dr Jones and the Secret of the Lost Keys" and will be focusing on the life and times of Moses. We hope that through this program, children will develop a burning passion for Christ.

KATRINA UPDATES

Thank-you once again for all of the donations I received to forward to survivors and families down south!

Update is as follows; All of the items left today Monday Morning for the Gulf Coast! Hooray for everyone who helped.

As most of you realize this is not a one time thing, it is and will be a continuing effort for a long time ahead. I will continue to collect supplies here at our farm. I have made arrangements that once a week they will pick up here at the farm and bring a semi to be loaded and will leave again for the Gulf Coast every Monday a.m.

That brings me to this: Saturday (this one coming) September 17th, I am designating "Give Till It Hurts, Then Give More, Clean out those Closets Saturday." Katy from Rackety Packety will be back in town at her wonderful shop selling her unique antiques and I will be there willingly accepting all donations of clothing and personal supplies to send down to The Hurricane survivors. Remember this is an on going effort. Together one by one we WILL make a big difference in these families lives. No one person can save the world, but as a group together we will definitely have an impact!

If anyone is interested in the adopt a family program, just ask. I can give you the info. It is a more personal way to get in touch with a family in a shelter and send small pkgs of their special needs.

Please don't forget the animals, there are many coming up for adoption and you can donate money also through www.noahswish.org

If in town drop off is easier we now have another drop off site, Natalie Jeannes restaurant (don't forget to have a slice of Bourbon Street Pie) or with Shannon Hartman at Crain Ford.

God Bless Everyone who has helped in anyway, anywhere.
 Joan Prible 260-375-4336
 (call for any info needed or to drop off).

CONGRATULATIONS:

As the past chairman of the Demolition Derby, I would like to congratulate A-Plus Towing and the Salamonie Summer Festival Committee on what I heard to be a good derby this past July. I'm sure all the hard work of getting the arrangements for the posters to be made and hung up around Warren and Markle for advertising, along with the time of making the big signs that were up along the highways, (that was an awesome idea) and all the phone calls to the company in Ohio for the first few months to get everything set up, I know was costly and very time consuming. I could continue, but I'm sure you all know what a wonderful group of people you are.

GED ON TV

Adults may now enroll in the autumn semester of the GED ON TV program to brush up on their skills and earn an Indiana GED High School Diploma.

The GED Connection multimedia television series is designed for adults who want to study from home as they prepare to take the GED test. The television programs will be broadcast on all Indiana PBS stations and many cable television systems beginning the week of October 2nd. The 39 half-hour television programs cover the reading, writing, social studies, science, and math that are on the GED test. Three workbooks go along with the television series.

New to the GED Connection series, learners who have access to the Internet can get extra practice with corresponding online lessons at <http://www.pbs.org/literacy>.

The five GED Tests are based on real life situations. Each section includes graphics to interpret. The math section is offered in two parts. The first part will permit the use of a calculator. To pass the GED, candidates are required to write an essay.

To enroll, adults may call 1.877.433.6688. The $45 enrollment fee includes a pretest, three workbooks, the official GED calculator to practice with at home, a post test, access to the toll-free GED ON TV Helpline and a voucher to pay for the student's GED test at

VB STORYTIME

A Recycle Party was held at the Van Buren Public Library, after school story time, September 9th, 2005. Karen introduced our special guest Susan Eichorn from the East Central Indiana Solid Waste District.

The children were asked the question, how many recycle at home? Everyone raised their hand. Susan explained how we can save many trees and the environment around us by recycling. Susan brought a game with her called pictionary. The children enjoyed playing this game. Susan would show the child a picture of something you could recycle. Then the person shown the picture would draw that picture then the others would guess what it was. The game was a lot of fun. We do have some artist in our community.

Karen read the book 'Paper, Paper Everywhere' by Gail Gibbons. This book explains how paper is made from trees. We found out how important it is to recycle so we don't have to cut down so many trees. Trees give off oxygen and are very important to our environment.

We made a litter bug, something no one wants to be, from a segment of an egg carton. It was fun to see what the children could make from a recycled egg container.

The refreshments were popcorn and cool aid.

Those attending were Karlee Laypoole, Emily Bryant, Olivia Bryant, Elizabeth Bryant and Jackson Reid.

This Friday after school we will celebrate Grandparents Day. If you can attend please bring your Grandparents or a friend. Hope to see you!

TOOTH TIPS

By: Dr. Kevin J DeaKyne DDS, PC

Is there a connection between tooth loss and heart disease??

A study that was published in the journal Stroke reports an association between missing teeth and clogged arteries. The study involved 711 people (Avg age of 66) who did not have cardiovascular disease. Researchers found that among people missing between 0 and 9 teeth 46% had a buildup of fatty substances in a major artery, but this percentage rose to approximately 60% among people who were missing 10 or more teeth. Missing teeth make it more difficult to properly chew healthy foods that can help prevent heart disease and other chronic conditions. People with missing teeth should be sure to eat sufficient vegetables and other foods rich in fiber and which keep beneficial soluble fiber even when cooked.

The recommendations by the Institute of Medicine for people over 50 years of age and younger are 38g of total fiber per day. For people older than 50 the recommended levels are 30g for men and 21g for women.¹

GRIEF SUPPORT

Losing a child can be one of the most difficult times of a parent's life. It's never expected and difficult to accept. Most people who have never gone through the death of a child have trouble understanding the depth of this loss.

A newly formed support group called Grief Support After the Death of a Child, will include people who have suffered the same loss, who will understand and can share with you comfort, hope, and how to work through this devastating time. This group will meet at 6:30pm on the second Wednesday of the month at the Wabash Friends Counseling Center's conference room.

"Unfortunately, I have met with more people lately that have lost a child. This is a devastating time for them and I am glad we are able to offer another type of support," stated Scott Makin, Director of the Wabash Friends Counseling Center. For more information you may call Scott Makin, 260-563-8452; 877-350-1658; or email at scott@wabashfriends.org.

This support group is sponsored by the Wabash Friends Counseling Center who also has 5 other support groups meeting: Divorce Care, Grief Share, Singles, Cancer Survivors and a support group for children who lost a parent through divorce or death. HOW TO RECYCLE

AND DO IT WELL

Recycling keeps valuable resources out of landfills and gets them into manufacturing plants where they can be used again. Here's how to be a better recycler:

* Know what you can recycle. Each community and recycling center wants only the materials on its accepted list. Don't put non-recyclables in recycle bins. They have to be sorted out by hand. Never put trash in with recycle.

* Rinse food containers before recycling. It keeps bugs and rodents away at your house and at the center.

* Remove caps, lids, and pumps. They are made of different material and are not recyclable. Put them in the trash.

* Skip the plastic bags and styrofoam. Use them around the house and for crafts, but don't include with recycle.

* Most plastic bottles are recyclable. If you doubt that one is, look for the chasing arrows around a number. Many centers accept only those with the number 1 or 2.

* Glass bottles and jars that held food or drinks are recyclable. Other glass objects, such as cookware, plates, glasses, mirrors, window glass, and light bulbs are not the same type of glass as container glass. They are a serious contaminant in making glass containers.

* Keep aluminum drink cans separated from other aluminum. The two have to be separated by sorters.

* Never include hazardous waste such as anything sharp or caustic. They are hazardous to handlers and sorters.

MY BASEBALL FANTASY CAMP TRIP (PART 2)

by Larry Dale Ryan
(Editors Note: Larry Dale Ryan is a former Warren High School graduate. He currently lives in Camby, IN. The first part of this article was published September 9, 2005)

Later in that same game, while attempting to field a hard ground ball at second base, the ball missed my mitt somehow and "nicked" my thigh, starting the leg to stiffen somewhat apparently. It was during the third game on Tuesday pm. after achieving my first base hit in camp, a bloop single over the second baseman's head, that I "pulled" a leg muscle while running towards second base on the following play. The coaching staff stressed the importance of starting out with a 70% effort and then tapering off to help prevent injuries. Always blessed with some speed in running, I momentarily forgot the coaches' advice and tried to accelerate.

I still believe that this problem would not have happened if I had not bruised that muscle earlier in the day. The injury limited my activity for the rest of the camp to batting and alternating in the infield at first base with two other teammates, one of which was also injured. A pinch runner would kneel near the umpire and run to first base for me when I hit the ball. I quickly discovered that it was difficult to break old habits as I batted again in that same game. This time, with the pinch runner set to run, I lined a grounder past the pitcher into centerfield. Instinctively, I started to run towards first base as I had done hundreds of times before only to have the injured muscle scream at me, "Stop you Idiot, I'm already on the D. L. (Disabled List)."

It was at this juncture in the camp that I decided to bat left-handed. The reasoning for this decision was threefold: I had already collected two hits from the right side of the plate, I had batted left-handed much of my high school career and had practiced it prior to camp, and thirdly it would take some stress off the injured muscle. So during the third trip to the plate in that infamous game, the ball found the bat from the left side of the plate and was grounded up the middle again, only to be speared by the pitcher this time. Again, I momentarily forgot about the substitute runner and made two steps towards first base at which time the aforementioned leg muscle complained strongly again. We won our first game at camp.

This injury required an introduction to the Training Room staff. The trainers recommended rubbing the muscle area with a heat-generating ointment and wrapping the leg to provide support. This became my routine prior to every game for the rest of camp.

We entered the fourth game with more confidence in our hitting ability. Our timing of the pitches improved as we became better accustomed to the speed of the ball and less anxious at bat. This proved extremely useful as we were facing one of the best teams. As luck would have it, our pitchers accidentally walked their best hitters during their second time through the lineup and they failed to score any more runs. It turned out to be our salvation as we prevailed for our second victory.

During batting practice prior to the fourth game, coach Kuntz noticed that I was not making effective contact with the ball while batting right-handed, and recommended that I bat left-handed instead. He probably sensed that the right leg muscle problem was hindering my swing. I did not record any hits, but played some infield at first base. Finally, I was getting accustomed to having a pinch runner, but had to seriously pretend that my time in the batter's box was batting practice and running was not necessary.

Our fifth game was scheduled under the lights on Wednesday evening at Henley Field, the former training facility of the Tigers. We lost but I played half the game at first base and garnered a bad-bounce single past the second baseman for hit #3. This one came while batting right-handed. I was moving better but luckily did not have to exhibit excessive mobility in the more spacious foul area near first base.

After gaining the lead in the sixth game and not accumulating a hit batting left-handed, I decided to return to my more natural, right-handed stance again. At the time that I was making that decision, the other team had run out of pitchers or the opposing coaches had conceded the game and were planning to save their pitching corps for the playoffs the next day. The coaches were allowed to pitch an inning if they had run out of campers who had fulfilled their two inning quota, who were healthy, or who did not have a phobia of being that close to a batter. It was in that instance that I faced my first major league pitcher. He was former Tiger, Dave Rozema and I knocked another single up the middle. Of course he was not throwing his

A" game and only made a lame attempt to field the ball, but a hit is a hit. This win gave our team a 3-3 record and the fourth seed in the playoffs.

Our team did not have a formal name, only that we were the # 1 team announced at orientation, but our unofficial team slogan was, "Have Fun," which our coaches advocated. Immediately before and after each game, we would all extend a hand into the center of the circle of surrounding teammates, stack hand vertically, and break the huddle with a shout of "FUN." This ritual helped promote a bond with our newly-formed teammates and helped to remind us that this opportunity to play fantasy baseball should be an enjoyable time.

The Friday morning playoff format pitted the third-seeded team against the sixth seed and we played the fifth seed. The first and second seeds received byes. We won the game 5-3. The other first baseman, who was 74 years of age, decided that he would let us younger campers do the fielding, so I received extended playing time at that position during the last two games. As fate would have it, I was involved in several plays, one of which resulted in a double play when the centerfielder made a running catch in shallow centerfield and threw the ball to me to double the runner trying to return to first base. I was off the base but made the tag on the runner. I figured that it would be better to give the centerfielder a target to throw to than to stumble around like an old man trying to locate the base for a force out.

It was during this game that I hit the ball the hardest of any during camp. It was a solid, line drive between the first and second basemen for a RBI single. Hit #5 was recorded. Again it happened while batting right-handed.
