GENEALOGY REPORT & AREA NEWS CONTINUED

DEAR EDITOR,

How do I say thank you enough? I am blessed with tremendous friends, like the Marcy Rosen family and the Julia Glessner family. Blessed with everyone's prayers, stories of David's antics, financial support, and the words of endearment towards David. David's and my family were amazed and grateful for the whole community and the gathering of the churches. What a feast at the dinner. I've lost my appetite but I know I gained a few pounds that night.

I ask that no one weep for me. I do not weep myself. I miss David, but my time with him was a blessing. He was a blessing. I don't mean it was easy. I can't say how many times David forgot the truck in town, or we'd go fishing, he'd get bored and go canning. I'd have to find him in the middle of nowhere. A time or two he took the truck while I was still fishing. David would make it home somehow, but couldn't remember where I was and what I was doing. Thank the Lord for cell phones. David had some but he always lost them. Didn't matter, he couldn't always remember how to use one. But David was still a blessing. My inner strength and patience grew extensively because of David.

David's death was even a blessing. Don't we all want our loved ones to die happy and with no suffering? The Lord has given me a great peace and understanding. David finished his last mission. Remember the dumpster lid incident? The day of his death, that very same business couple called and asked David to come empty out the barrel they had set aside for cans for him. We had no idea they had done this for him. So please forgive this couple. They made a change and that's the first step. Turning the other cheek may be harder, but it's more rewarding. We all fall short of the Glory of God, but if we want peace on earth, we must practice it first.

Now, I don't plan to leave Warren. Why would I want to leave heaven on earth? I do plan to still collect cans. Half in memorial to David, half in order to help provide for myself. I don't get survivor benefits till I turn 60. I'm only going on 42. David wasn't a full veteran of the armed services. He was released without an honorable or dishonorable discharge. I tell this, not so you'll help me financially, but just so you know.

I know I only have to whisper in this community a hundred hands will pick me up. I am so grateful for all of you, but don't want to take you for granted.

If EVER anybody needs help for anything, call me, I'm in the book.

I'll need a little time to settle in, figure out how I'll do the cans, but I want to be there for everyone as all have been for me.

Please support the Warren Weekly. I still have personal thank you's to send but Nicki has always been gracious to allow me to reach more people, more quickly. Isn't she a blessing to all?

Thank You
Pam Uncapher

THANK YOU

We want to express our appreciation and thanks to the people who extended their condolences and sympathy to us in the passing of our mother, Ruby Irick.

We want to express special thanks to all the people at Glancy Funeral Home. They did everything they possibly could to help us through this unhappy time. They were wonderful.

We thank our friends and neighbors who did so many things for us. The flowers and cards sent, the food provided, and the expressions of love, prayers and sympathy were all greatly appreciated. Thanks also to the SOS group for the food at the family room at the Funeral Home. Words cannot express our appreciation for their loving support.

Thanks to Rev Barry Humble for a very meaningful funeral service. Thanks to all the members of the Boehmer Church for the lunch following the service. Not only was the lunch a wonderful meal, but the time of breaking bread together enabled us to visit with friends and many relatives. This time was needed and helped us very much.

Thanks again to everyone for being so kind and so concerned and supportive.

God Bless You,
The Ruby Irick Family

WANTED

Work on a video history to commemorate the 100th birthday of Indiana state parks and reservoirs, which will be celebrated in 2016, has started. To connect that video with Hoosiers from all around the state, the DNR Division of State Parks and Reservoirs is seeking stories and videos from those who have visited the properties over the years.

The video, which will air in fall 2009, is being developed in partnership with WTIU, the public television station in Bloomington.

Items sought vary from old still photos to slides, film, videotape, and souvenirs from visits to any of Indiana's 24 state parks. Examples include scenic black-and-white photos from the 1930s, 8mm film of family camping trips in the 1960s, postcards, buttons, pins or banners. Written descriptions of the items and any stories or memories associated with the object are encouraged.

Only images and memorabilia received before June 2009 will be considered for use in the production.

Items related to Indiana's nine reservoir properties (Mississinewa, Salamonie, Roush, Monroe, Brookville, Patoka, Cagles Mill/Lieber, Cecil M. Harden/Raccoon and Hardy Lakes) will be collected, too, but at a later time.

Items may be loaned or donated. WTIU will create digital copies of loaned items, then return the originals to the owner. Items donated will be archived or curated for future use in a State Parks and Reservoirs Centennial collection.

Photos, film and other memorabilia submitted may also be used on the Web, in Outdoor Indiana magazine, and in exhibits, brochures and other interpretive media over the next few years, as the Indiana State Parks Centennial celebration starts to move into full swing.

Those who may not have photos or physical objects to contribute are welcome to contribute a memorable story or experience at an Indiana state park.

To contribute to this project, download and complete a release form at interpretiveservices.IN.gov, then mail it with your photos or other memorabilia to:

Indiana Department of Natural Resources, Division of State Parks and Reservoirs, c/o Leslie Nocton, Historian, 402 W. Washington St., W298, Indianapolis, IN 46204

If you would like to have the item(s) returned, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

To find out more about the Indiana State Parks Centennial, obtain a hard copy of the information and release form, or ask a question about donating, please contact Leslie Nocton, (317) 234-6442, lnocton@dnr.IN.gov.

IMMUNIZATION AWARENESS

Governor Daniels has declared September 21-27 as Adult Immunization Awareness Week according to Roland Grieb, M.D., chair of the Indiana Adult Immunization Coalition.

In his proclamation, the Governor called for Hoosiers to increase their knowledge, acceptance and use of vaccines to protect adolescents and adults against serious, life-threatening disease.

"Each year tens of thousands of adolescents and adults die from vaccine-preventable diseases of their complications across the U.S.," Grieb said. He continued that the deaths are spread among all ages, cultures, races, ethnic and societal groups.

"Safe and effective vaccines are readily available to protect against disease, disability and death from communicable disease," Grieb said. He explained that communicable diseases are those diseases that are transmitted from one person to another directly by contact with any bodily discharge or indirectly from contaminated objects like door handles or telephone handsets.

Communicable diseases are those that are caused by bacteria, fungi, parasites and viruses.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends that older adults get the following vaccines:

Influenza (flu) vaccine - Adults should get the flu vaccine every year to avoid getting the flu and spreading it to loved ones. Every year in the U.S., an average of 36,000 people die from the flu. Most of these deaths are among adults 65 years old and older.

Pneumococcal vaccine - One shot reduces the risk of pneumococcal disease. Pneumococcal disease can cause serious infections of the lungs (pneumonia), the bloodstream (bacteremia), and the covering of the brain (meningitis). Pneumococcal disease is one of the most common causes of vaccine-preventable death in the U.S. and is particularly dangerous for older adults.

Shingles vaccine - One shot reduces the risk of shingles and long-term pain after shingles in adults 60 years old and older. Shingles is a disease that causes a painful, blistering rash. One in five people with shingles will have severe, long-term pain after the rash heals. Shingles is more common and more serious in older adults. Nearly 1 million Americans get shingles every year and about half of them are 60 years old and older. Shingles shares the same virus as chickenpox.

The Indiana Adult Immunization Coalition is a voluntary group of health and older adult focused organizations dedicated to eradicating vaccine preventable deaths and disease among adults. The Coalition promotes education and outreach activities to increase awareness of and participation in adult immunizations.

PROPER LEAF DISPOSAL

by Commissioner Thomas Easterly, Indiana Department of Environmental Management

Along with children returning to school, autumn brings with it the bounty of summer's harvest, crisp evening air and the changing color of fall foliage. While nature's beauty provides a glorious visual display, what Hoosiers do with fallen leaves can affect the environment.

Historically, many Hoosiers have been quick to reach for their matches to rid their yards of fallen leaves and other yard wastes, such as grass clippings, branches and weeds. While burning gets rid of the wastes, the smoke from these fires affects air quality, so setting fire to yard debris is not advised. Smoke from all fires releases carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides, fine particles and ozone-forming chemicals and can cause a number of negative impacts for Hoosiers and our environment. Unlike dry, seasoned fire wood, fallen leaves have high moisture content and tend to smolder, releasing thick, unhealthy smoke that can affect family members, neighbors and our environment.

Why should we be concerned about finding alternatives to open burning leaves and other yard waste? Anyone can be affected from the unhealthy smoke from burning piles of leaves. Elderly, young children and individuals with respiratory or heart ailments are particularly vulnerable to ill health effects from fine particle emissions. The United States Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA) revised the threshold for both particulate matter and ozone, holding all communities accountable for ensuring concentrations lower than ever before. As a result, all of us should work together to prevent unhealthy emissions from unnecessary open burning of leaves and other yard waste.

The good news is there are simple things every one of us can do to improve air quality, starting with the disposal of yard debris. The best way to get rid of leaves, branches and other yard wastes is by composting, chipping and mulching. These options can be done in your own yard or through a program set up with your city, township or county. Composting returns nutrients to the soil instead of releasing harmful chemicals into the air. Chipped wood can be used around trees and in flower beds to retain soil moisture and control weeds. Mulching leaves on the lawn with a lawn mower returns nutrients to the grass, fertilizing your yard. Raking leaves into a pile and composting them over the winter creates a fertile soil amendment that can be used for flower beds, gardens and potted plants in the spring. Food scraps can be added to an active compost pile year-round to reduce the amount of kitchen waste being sent to landfills.

Since burning leaves, twigs and other yard waste is bad for the environment, I strongly recommend considering alternative ways of ridding your yard of waste. Smoke is unhealthy to breathe, it's a hazard, and there are safer, cleaner and more environmentally-friendly ways of disposal. To learn more about ways to dispose of yard debris, visit IDEM's Web site at <http://www.IN.gov/idem/4525.htm>.
