KUDOS, KICKS & KARATS

DEAR EDITOR:

I drove through Elwood last week, where dozens and dozens of huge, immense turbines spread throughout the countryside.

My heart goes out to its residents. Whatever possessed that town to buy into the Apex plan? A promise of money (gov't subsidized, of course); a worship of so-called "progress," like that of the ethanol, solar, or one-world-united dreams?

Whatever: Elwood's countryside is now ruined for the rest of their and their children's lifetimes. The scale of each turbine is so great that it can only be called monstrous. And, most disturbing about the scene, visible for miles and miles, is that these immense machines are moving, endlessly moving – unless the wind stops.

IAB SHRED EVENT

iAB Financial Bank invited the community to take advantage of a free community shredding event on Saturday, June 28th from 9-11 a.m. at three locations in communities they serve. With identity theft on the rise as the fastest growing crime in America, offering a safe and secure method of document destruction is one of the many ways iAB is committed to serving the community. By offering this event, iAB welcomed customers and non-customers to be proactive in protecting their identity by purging those old files of unwanted, but still confidential documents.

This iAB event resulted in the safe destruction of nearly 10,000 lbs of sensitive material by partnering with a professional shredding service to ensure proper procedures in handling these items. "We reach out to our community, partnering with them in the ways that make sense and are of true service to them," stated Michael C. Marhenke, iAB President and CEO. "This shred event is just one way we seek to be a proactive partner in protection from identity theft."

iAB Financial Bank, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Independent Alliance Banks, Inc., is one of the largest locally owned community banks in the area and employs approximately 285 people throughout Allen, Huntington and Wells counties.

END OF SUMMER EVENT

The Warren Public Library invites all the young scientists who signed up for the Summer Reading Program, their families, and anyone else interested in science to watch a demo from Fort Wayne's Science Central! What happens when you cool the temperature of everyday objects way, way down?

The Science Central group will be in Warren on Tuesday, July 22 from 7:00-7:30. As the library is too small to host the event, find us at Heritage Pointe. We will be in the 2nd floor Recreation Room.

The Library may be taking pictures of the event for publicity purposes. If you prefer that yourself or your child not be photographed, please let us know.

CONVENTION

Sigma Phi International Sorority, Inc. founded in Hartford City, Indiana, welcomed nearly 400 women to Indianapolis for their annual convention in late June.

Sigma Phi Gamma International Sorority, Inc. is an organization dedicated to women of all ages in the US and Canada. Members work locally, and at the international level, providing service and resources to those in need. Each woman is unique, philanthropic, and civic minded.

This year Sigma Phi Gamma's International service work went to Project Cuddle a non-profit charity that helps frightened girls and women in making safe and legal decisions instead of abandoning their newborn babies. To date, Project Cuddle has rescued more than 736 babies across the United States and Canada.

Robin Pelton, Sigma Phi Gamma's International Service Secretary, shares, "Project Cuddle helps pregnant high school girls and women with medical care, counseling, emotional support, supplies, housing, and parenting classes, all in a confidential and caring environment. They also have produced an educational video making students aware of other available options to baby abandonment. Project Cuddle will greatly benefit from our members' generous donations. It costs about $2,500 to rescue just one baby."

Debbe Magnusen, Executive Director of Project Cuddle, spoke to the Sigma Phi Gamma delegation at the convention's Welcome Breakfast on June 26. At that time the generosity of thousands of women in the US and Canada became evident as the annual service project donation check was presented to Project Cuddle.

In addition to Project Cuddle, SPG Sisters participated in an International Convention Service Project, delivering several thousand dollars worth of socks and gift cards to a local program called Women of Worth. This organization assists families in crisis and domestic violence victims to increase self-reliance and improve quality of life by helping them rebuild their lives with dignity, hope and safety.

Liz Cochran, newly elected International President of Sigma Phi Gamma has shared with the public many times, "The Sisters of our sorority work hard, play hard, and give hard—meeting the needs of children, women, families, and communities. I'm so proud of the generosity of our members to support the vital work of Project Cuddle and Women of Worth."

NEW HU CLASS

Huntington University cut the ribbon and opened the doors to its first doctorate program and its first campus in Fort Wayne today, July 14.

Huntington's occupational therapy program is the university's first doctorate program and its first degree in the allied health field.

"Launching a graduate program in occupational therapy is an exciting venture for HU," said Dr. Ann McPherrin, vice president for strategy and graduate/adult programs. "Preparing occupational therapists at HU isn't just about teaching skills and credentialing students. It's about developing leaders who have a heart for serving others and who have the knowledge and motivation to positively impact their places of employment and our communities."

The program is located at the newly renovated site on the Parkview Randallia campus in Fort Wayne. The second and third floor of the former Fort Wayne Cardiology building houses office space, a student lounge and specialty classrooms and labs, such as pediatrics and neuromusculoskeletal spaces as well as an Activities of Daily Living (ADL) lab which houses a traditional bathroom and kitchen for hands-on learning.

"Classroom technology will be used to aid student learning with hands-on application for clinical assessments and interventions," said Dr. Ruth Ford, director of occupational therapy. "Students will demonstrate competencies as well as synthesize and evaluate systems necessary for health and wellness for individuals, populations and organizations."

Ford brings a wealth of experience to the program as its director. She has 37 clinical years of experience in management, acute care, rehabilitation, outpatient, long-term care and home health. She has managed more than 500 occupational and physical therapists and speech language pathologists and has opened multiple occupational therapy programs. In addition to her clinical work, she has 13 years of experience in academia, including expertise in the clinical and business aspects of the field.

"The three full-time OTD faculty and three adjunct faculty members bring a great wealth of clinical and professional experience," Ford said. "We are committed to providing a rigorous, dynamic education that will prepare future occupational therapy practitioners to meet client and organizational demands in an ever-changing and challenging health care system."

The inaugural class will feature a diverse group of 32 students from across the country, ranging from recent graduates to those who have prior medical and business experience. Students will study three years to earn their doctorates. A master's degree is not needed to study in this program.

The program is offered in Fort Wayne because of the strong health care presence in the community. Students will have access to local health care professions to build on their experiences as well as strengthen their skills through internships.

"Collaboration with Parkview and the greater Fort Wayne area is instrumental in the success of training future OTDs," Ford said. "Health and wellness go beyond the institutional doors into the greater community. Key leaders and health care providers have stepped up to not only provide resources for classrooms and laboratories but also have made recommendations for networks for future learning experiences."

To learn more about the program, visit www.huntington.edu/occupational-therapy.

INSPECT HOME FENCING TO ENSURE YOUR HOME'S

SAFETY AND SECURITY

(BPT) - Weather extremes are brutal on exterior landscaping. Rain, snow, wind and temperature variances all take a toll, especially on residential fencing.

Rain accelerates rust and wood-rot, and ground freezing and thawing or high winds can affect gate alignment. Gate misalignment - as well as rusty, metal hinges and latches - can lead to gates that no longer close securely. These conditions can be dangerous or even deadly if ignored. Weakened or damaged fencing can open up your property to unwanted intruders.

Now's the time to inspect fencing, gates and gate hardware around your property to ensure all are in good working condition.

Selecting the right gate hardware can easily solve most of these problems. Innovative gate hinges and latches by D&D Technologies are made of super strong engineering polymers that will not rust, are adjustable, self-lubricating and include high-grade stainless steel mounting hardware. They require little or no maintenance over the years and are backed by a lifetime limited warranty.

You can update your gates so that they are self-closing and self-latching, improve their security and overall look, in just a few minutes with these unique products. D&D latches feature built-in key locks, which eliminate the hassles and extra cost of a separate padlock or pull-string. The company's TrueClose hinges have a built-in self-closing spring that is tension adjustable for different gate weights with a twist of a screwdriver and eliminates those dangerous and unsightly external springs. These products are simple to install, and some models include easy vertical and horizontal adjustments, which help keep gates properly aligned for secure closing, years after the products are installed.

Fences protect children and pets from danger - whether they're designed to keep toddlers out of swimming pools or to keep children and pets in the yard, away from busy traffic. Properly working gates can also reduce homeowners' liability.

Even if your fence has been erected primarily to define your property line, access gates that don't close or latch properly are ineffective. When was the last time you checked each gate around your property?

"In our research, we found that when homeowners consider their fencing needs, rusty metal gate hardware that no longer functions properly was their No. 1 concern," says D&D Technologies' Senior Vice President Jim Paterson. "Most homeowners are not aware that rust-free and adjustable gate hardware is available."

If you have a pool or spa, or want to prevent children from opening any gate, D&D's MagnaLatch is specifically designed for these situations. It meets all international swimming pool barrier codes and is endorsed by many safety experts.

"Now is a great time to ensure that your fences and gates are functioning properly and are protected from rust, a destructive force that can render gate hardware useless," says Paterson. "Common gate latches are inexpensive and function fine when new. However, as soon as rust sets in, these latches no longer close without manual assistance. A quick inspection - and if needed - the minutes spent installing new gate hardware, can help protect your family and property, increasing security and decreasing liability."

D&D's rust-free gate hardware is available through fencing contractors and also direct to consumers under the Stanley or National Hardware brand through Lowe's and other hardware retailers.

SAVE TIME AND PREVENT INJURY WHEN DOING YARD WORK

(StatePoint) While caring for your lawn can be pleasant, it needn't take all day. Luckily, time saving tools can also save your body some wear and tear:

- Water plants with a heavy-duty sprayer. Since gardeners are prone to knee injuries from repetitive pressure placed upon the area, a sprayer you can use standing up is a better choice.
- More than 38,000 Americans sustained raking-related injuries in 2012, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. For a more efficient collection of leaves, pine needles and grass clippings, consider using a high-performance lawn sweeper.

- Save your back and some time by avoiding wheelbarrows and over-the-shoulder hauling. Instead, move tools, soil, mulch and yard clippings quickly and with ease with a cargo carrier or utility cart.

- Shave off hours off yard work while also avoiding the repetitive arm, elbow, wrist and hand movements that cause injury with a dethatcher that gently combs dead grass and roots to the surface where they can be swept up.

This season, make more of your days outdoors by spending less time doing chores and more time relaxing.
