Col. Patrick R. Renwick, Commander of the Indiana Air National Guard's 122nd Fighter Wing, Fort Wayne, Indiana, will give an update on the guard's mission, training, deployment, redeployment and overall readiness as the U.S. military continues to battle the global war on terrorism.

Col. muzzleloader, and special antlerless seasons combined using legal equipment, including crossbows.

NEW OPTIONS

Still scratching your head over what's legal and what isn't in the new rifle regulations for deer hunting in Indiana this year?

Here are three questions that will guide you to the correct answers:

1. Does the rifle have a barrel at least 16 inches long?
2. Is the rifle chambered to fire a cartridge with a case length of at least 1.16 inches?
3. Does that cartridge fire a bullet that is either .243 inches or .308 inches in diameter (or their metric equivalents, 6mm and 7.62mm, respectively)?

If the answer is yes to all three, then it's legal under HEA 1231, a law passed earlier this year by the State Legislature.

If the answer is "no" to any of those three questions, it does not meet the HEA 1231 standards for new rifle options.

Remember: Bullet diameter, cartridge case length and barrel length are the determining factors of this law.

Any bullet smaller than .243 (6mm), larger than .308 (7.62mm), or in between .243 and .308 does not qualify. Neither does a cartridge with a case length that is less than 1.16 inches, or a rifle with a barrel shorter than 16 inches.

Here's a twist, though. Some cartridges may appear to fall outside the allowable .243 and .308 requirements because of how they are labeled.

Take the .240 Weatherby Magnum, for instance. Disregard the .240 label because the bullet diameter actually is .243 inches and therefore legal to use.

Similarly, .30, .30-06 and .300-caliber cartridges are legal because their bullet diameters are .308 inches.

- A few more points:
- The new rifle options can be used only on private land.
  - Full-metal jacketed bullets are illegal.
  - A hunter can possess only 10 of these legal rounds while in the field.
  - There is no tree-stand requirement to use the new rifle options.

The new law does not change regulations previously approved for centerfire rifles chambered for so-called pistol cartridges. Those regulations allow for rifles chambered for cartridges that fire a bullet of .357-inch diameter or larger and have a case length of 1.16 inches to 1.8 inches. Unlike the new high-caliber rifle options, these can be used on private and public land to hunt deer.

If you still have questions about new rifle options for deer hunting, call (317) 232-4003 or (317) 232-4200.

The high-spirited rivalry between the farmers and cowmen of the Western Indian Territory provides the colorful, turn-of-the-century backdrop for Curley and Laurey's love story. But with these headstrong romantics holding the reins, the road to love is as bumpy as a surrey ride down a dusty road. Despite many hardships, their rocky romance leads to a new life beginning in a brand new state.

According to director Tracy Manning, "Oklahoma! is more than a love story. It was produced just after the US entered WWII... it's part of America's story. Our production considers what this story means for us today: How do we address issues of ownership, gender, and family in America? Do we share the same dreams? By looking at our past, we might find common ground."

Taylor Theatre provides an immersive experience for audiences and participants by pursuing excellence on and off the stage, embracing difficulty and asking questions in pursuit of truth.

Innovative Companies of 2013. In 2014, WGU's secondary teacher preparation program ranked first among 2,400 schools for quality by the National Council on Teacher Quality (NCTQ). According to a study conducted by Gallup in 2016, WGU graduates are more likely than those from other U.S. universities to have the jobs they want, feel engaged at work, and have an emotional attachment to their alma maters.

EARLY CHILDHOOD IMPACT

The first few years of childhood are critical to a young person's entire life. The experiences children have in those early years set them on a trajectory that can lead to successes or set them up to face extra challenges. Science and research show how important early interaction is for children. It affects them physically, mentally, socially and academically.

That's why the Indiana Youth Institute (IYI) and Family Service Society, Inc. are hosting a special community event for parents, teachers, community leaders, youth workers and other caring adults to learn more about the important role those early childhood years play in lives of Hoosier children.

The event will feature a free movie screening and panel discussion. It will run from 3 to 5 p.m. on Thursday, November 10 at the Globe Theater at Indiana Wesleyan University, 4201 South Washington Street in Marion.

Attendees will see the first installment in the five-part series "The Raising of America: Early Childhood and the Future of Our Nation." This documentary will explore the issue of why so many children in America are faring poorly, what the consequences are for the nation and how to make improvements and set children on a better path.

Following the film, attendees will participate in a panel discussion led by Alicia Hazelwood, executive director of the United Way of Grant County. The panel will include:

- Kresha Warnock, the president of the Indiana Association for the Education of Young Children and instructor at Ball State University's department of family and consumer services,
- Liz Strong, a teacher at Westview Elementary School in the Mississinewa Community School Corporation, and
- Amanda Lopez, the president of Transform Consulting Group.

The panel will discuss how to reframe the way we look at early child health and development, as well as how each community can make a difference for its children.

RED RIBBON RALLY/MARCH AT SALAMONIE SCHOOL

On Friday, October 28, 2016, Salamonie School staff and students participated in a Red Ribbon Rally and Mayor's March. Dressed in red from head to toe, students celebrated the importance of living drug free lives.

Students met in the gym which was decorated with backdrops and banners. Everyone recited the drug free pledge led by the Salamonie Just Say No Club. The students also watched a Drug Free Rap performed by the Just Say No Club.

Special visitor, Huntington Mayor Brooks Fetters, spoke about the importance of making good choices and being a leader. His message was well received, and very important for our students.

Students then went on a march around the school led by the mayor to "stomp out drugs in the community". Students continued their march to the track outside where they each received a bottle of bubbles to "Blow Away Drugs". Students enjoyed the spirit of the day, and pledged to continue their commitment of a drug free life by signing a banner that was presented to the mayor for his office.

Students enjoyed dressing up for different spirit days all week and looked forward to prize winners being announced at the end of each day. A special thanks to Warren Subway for providing free cookies for our students in honor of Red Ribbon Week. We appreciate the effort of everyone involved in making it a great week!
